

EDWARD COLBURN'S GARRISON HOUSE

This house was built by Edward¹ Colburn after the Indians had burned the first one owned by him. A careful examination shows that the oldest part is seen at the left as one faces the picture. Between the doors is the division line, and the remainder dates to very early times, while the addition at the rear is of modern date.

INTRODUCTION.

As the years roll by, the descendants of the early settlers become more deeply impressed with the importance of family histories and genealogical records. For many centuries records of discoveries, explorations, wars and civil transactions have been preserved from which in later years have been woven the histories of the world and by which we are, as it were, kept in communication with past ages.

While time and thought and money have been lavished on records of war and explorations of bygone days, family records have been neglected. The later generations are endeavoring to repair this neglect by placing before the public the history of their progenitors. The sources of information are very meagre. They are limited to the memory of the older people, which is unreliable to a certain extent, to town records which are, in some cases, kept very imperfectly, to records of wills and deeds, and to old records in family Bibles, which last are the most reliable. An earnest effort has been made to have this book as free from errors as possible. There will be mistakes in proper names and dates which no genealogist can avoid. The Town Clerks of earlier days had little education and often spelled names as they were pronounced, the ink would fade and the books get worn and mutilated. They would be kept in the attics of farm houses and a few hours would see them reduced to ashes in the burning building, and the records of years destroyed.

The writer of this history is indebted to all who have so kindly assisted in making it a success, for the letters of encouragement and cheer which have been received, and the interest shown in the work. It has been a long and at times a seemingly hopeless task, but a lover of genealogy will not be dismayed by difficulties. The writer has sent a large number of letters to the different parts of the United States and replies have been received with valuable information. But in too many instances no reply has been received, and through this neglect there will be an absence of records which otherwise would be preserved. A little negligence, a little procrastination, a feeling that an answer is of no consequence, and a record of perhaps several families fails to appear on the pages of the book. A very small percentage of the letters have been returned unclaimed, but by far the greater number has been unanswered.

No attempt has been made to record the descendants of any one of the name, of those who came from across the sea, excepting those of Edward. There were others who arrived about the same year. Savage in his Early Gleanings says, "July 17, 1635.

Goodspeed - 27.50

These underwritten names are to be transported to New England. Embarked in the "Defence" of London, Edward Bostock, Master per certificate, &c., Robert Colburn, aged 28, Edward, aged 17, and in the "James" shortly after, John May, Master, William Colbon, aged 16." Names of Cockburn, Colbourne, Colburn and Coburn are to be found in the early histories of Great Britain and Ireland, but however spelt, it is generally agreed by those who have made a study of the name that the English and Scotch pronunciation is Coburn. In England at the present day we have proof of this in the name of the locality in London, High Holborn, which is pronounced Hoburn. In this country the word is pronounced as spelled, the letter "I" not being silent. There is good reason to believe that the name is not a Saxon but Scandinavian name and that the family came to England with the Danes, that they were sea kings and that the name means either black bear or king's bear.

The bear was a sacred animal with the Danes and has given us a number of names, e. g., Thorburn, Thor being the god of mythology who gave his name to Thursday or Thors Day. Another word is Blackburn or black bear. Tracing back the family of Gen. Washington, we find that the word Washington was a title, the family name being Hertburn and the family of Danish origin. It is possible that it may be a Scotch name meaning Coldstream, a burn being a small brook, or English relating to an occupation, viz: coal burner. The name is found spelled in different ways. The writer finds in the "Soldiers and Sailors of Mass. in the Revolution," twenty-eight different ways of spelling the name. In the Century Dictionary of proper names we find the following statement: "Sir John Colborne born at Lyndhurst, Hampshire, Feb. 16, 1778, died at Torquay, Devonshire, Apr. 17, 1863. An English General, served in Portugal, France and Spain under Wellington from 1809 to 1814, also at Waterloo in 1815."

Sir John was knighted for excellent service at the Battle of Waterloo in 1815. He gave the famous order to attack the Old Guard, a part of the French army under Napoleon. He was afterward Governor General of Canada. Port Colborne, a few miles west of Buffalo, is named in his honor.

Sir John was given the title of Lord Seaton and was the Commanding Officer in the Canadian insurrection of 1837. The coat of arms of Sir John, Creation, dated Dec. 14, 1839.

Argent, on a chevron, between three bugle horns, stringed sable, as many mullets of the first, on a chief embattled gules, pendant from a riband of the last, fimbriated, azure. Crest out of a mural crown, or, a reindeer's head argent, attired, or between a branch of laurel in the dexter and a branch of palm in the sinister, both ppr.

Motto: Sperat Infestes. (See Burke's Peerage.)

Sir John was created Field Marshal in 1860.

The crest of Sir John appears to be very old and to have many variations. In one we have the head of a gemsbok with spiral horns issuing from a mural crown; another, a demi-dragon with wings endorsed, holding a scutcheon charged with rondel shield.

In 1815 Admiral Sir George Cockburn (pronounced Coburn) had command of the vessel which conveyed the Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte to St. Helena after his defeat at Waterloo. A letter to the writer from Mr. William R. Nesbitt of Sutton in Ashfield, Notts, England, conveys the following information: "The Irish Coburns came from Scotland where the name is spelt Cockburn. The name is said by antiquarians to be a corruption of Colbrand.

The coat of arms is a shield with two cocks in chief and one in base in the act of crowing. Below the torse, a helmet belonging to the rank of esquire. Above the torse, a mailed arm holding a lance horizontally, showing the head of the lance broken and in the act of falling. Motto: Vigilans et audax.

These Coburns settled in County Armagh and descended from them was a John, b. 1761, who lived at Drumbaugher in that county. While visiting Belfast he was impressed and served for five years in the English Army, fighting against the Americans in the War of the Revolution.

We find a record of a Colborne in Laycock, Wiltshire, Eng., as follows:

¹John Colborne.

²Robert Colborne, b. 1583; m. Elizabeth Powell.

³Robert Colborne, b. 1617; buried in Laycock churchyard; mar. Elizabeth Crew.

⁴Thomas, b. 1646; m. Elizabeth ———.

Children:

SAMUEL, b. 1675.

HENRY, b. 1679.

ROBERT, b. 1681.

JOSEPH, b. 1684.

BENJAMIN, b. 1687; probably d. in infancy.

BENJAMIN.

The first four may have been in a line of descent, as the interval in the dates would allow of such an arrangement, but we have no proof of the fact and no further knowledge of the family.

There was also at Devizes in Wiltshire a Coburn or Colburn family. It has not been thought advisable to attempt to trace the ancestry of Edward, but rather to confine our study to his descendants.

The Coburns and Colburns have been represented in every war since their arrival in this country. One lost his life in defending the Town of Brookfield when threatened by an Indian invasion during King Philip's War of 1675.

They were found in the wilds of Maine in 1725, with Lovewell's expedition, at the siege of Louisburg in the French and Indian War of 1745. They bore an honorable part in the struggle for liberty, taking part in every campaign from Bunker Hill and Lexington to the Surrender at Saratoga. They were on the side of good order in Shay's Rebellion of 1786.

The second war with Great Britain in 1812 called many from their homes into the service. They gave their lives in Mexico during the war of 1848. The large number of those of the name who enlisted in the Civil War of 1861 to 1865 proves the courage and devotion of the sons to preserve the rights and liberties for which their fathers fought. The late war with Cuba had representatives of the family who served honorably in the field.

They have held civil offices as Governor, members of Congress, representatives to General Court, Judges, Mayors, etc. They have reached high rank as Admirals in the Navy and Generals in the Army. We find them foremost as eloquent speakers, devoted ministers and able lawyers, skillful surgeons and faithful teachers. In the realm of exploration, invention, mercantile life, manufacturing and farming, they have shown marked ability.

In the preparation of this work, a careful study of the early history of this family has been made. The location of the farm in the wilderness is known to a certain extent, but its exact bounds cannot be determined. The dam at Pawtucket Falls, Lowell, has caused the water to overflow many acres of the original farm. Diligent study of deeds give corners and angles as located at a marked tree, a heap of stones, a stake and stones or a ditch. These bounds disappeared and were obliterated by the hand of time, but in the earlier days were sufficient, as the owners at stated intervals perambulated the lines and renewed the monuments, as they were called. The line between the Military Grant and the Indian Reservation can be located, as it was a stated number of rods from a brook now in existence, and the extreme end was at Tyng's Island, called in those days Wickasook, but at what point between the two mentioned places the Varnum's and Coburn's division was made we cannot determine.

The coat of arms is shown, but we have no proof that it was ever issued by any College of Heraldry. A strong argument in its favor is that copies found in different families were cherished and carefully kept by our ancestors, whose occupation of fighting Indians, and clearing the land for farming, would give them little time or inclination for the production of coats of arms. They are to us of the present day a matter of curiosity, and we preserve them as a part of the history of our progenitors. The families of the descendants of Edward in the male line only are recorded. The record of nearly three hundred years, and embracing the descendants of the six sons of Edward, would be impracticable, if the attempt were made to record the names of any not Colburns or Coburns.

The earlier records were prepared for this work by the late Mr. George A. Gordon of Somerville, Mass., formerly Secretary of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, whose experience along genealogical lines has been of great value in tracing the families who were the progenitors of the present generations. The infirmities of age have prevented his finishing the book, and the records of the later years and the arrangement of the families for publication have been placed in charge of the present writer.

The success of the work is due to the assistance rendered by Mr. Walter Coburn of Lowell, Mass., who has given freely of his time and business ability and has provided the funds necessary for the compiling and publishing.

The burial places of the early Coburns are unknown. In those days public cemeteries, unless in thickly settled villages, were unknown, and the dead were buried in the fields or on the hillside and the location of the graves forgotten. It is doubtless the case that Edward and at least four of his sons are buried within the limits of the farm, but no record was kept, and if a rude headstone was erected it has disappeared. The earliest burial whose grave can be found is that of Thomas³, son of Thomas², whose headstone may be seen in an old cemetery at Tyngsboro.

An entry found in the records relating to the Colburns is worth preserving, as it is probably a verdict of a coroner's jury.

THE COAT OF ARMS.

There is no proof that the coat of arms is genuine. The writer has searched records and consulted authorities on heraldry and been unable to find any device corresponding to this. It is considered of value and worthy of insertion in this book by reason of the fact that copies have been preserved amongst the old families of different descendants of Edward.¹ These show marks of age, and were preserved by our ancestors with care, and the different copies are alike excepting in some minor points.

The early settlers were employed in clearing the forests, exterminating the bears and protecting their homes from the Indians, thus having no time or inclination for heraldry.

From the coat of arms a blazon has been constructed as follows: Ermine, on a shield a chevron, or, with two cinque foils in chief, centered sanguine, leaved of the second, and in the base a martlet, on a sword barwise, winged sable, closed, contourné. Crest, a wolf's head, coupéd, contourné. Another explanation of the device has been furnished by one who has in her possession, and who is a descendant of John² and Ezra,² an ancient copy.

"The shield of Ermine fur is one of the oldest forms of covering (Bucklers), as it blunted the arrows and darts in use at that time. The charge of the chevron was held in high esteem by the family of 'De Clare' and their numerous branch. The bear's head coupéd, dates to the early century, 1344. The twisted crest of Gold and red was worn beneath the helm, and represented above the shield. The roses (red) of Lancaster are blazoned proper. The sword shows gallant military service. The bird (martlet) is at rest, wings closed, and in most cases shows the difference of the fourth son. Name of Coburn."

The old copies show scrolls, festoons, tassels, etc., which probably are not intended for the device, but rather seem to be the work of some artist who wished to embellish it with decorations; but it has been thought advisable to retain them. Of this the writer of the above further says: "A Scotch inter-marriage or inheritance is shown by the thistles. The scrolls and leaves supporting the shield merely shows that in battle they could bring followers or supporters to fight in their cause."

THE WEBB FARM.

Edward Colburn was probably the first settler in Dracut who owned land with the intention of making a permanent settlement. The names of Tyng, Hinchman and Webb appear as owners, but they held their land only for sale and were not settlers but speculators. Previous to this time Samuel Varnum had purchased land in "ye wilderness on ye Northerne side of Merrimac River," but on account of the danger caused by the Indian raids safety was secured only by the occupation of garrison houses, and consequently Varnum had his dwelling temporarily on the Chelmsford side of the river, crossing in a boat to cultivate the land.

The wording of the early deeds and grants are vague and unsatisfactory. The angles are made at "a stake and stones," "a pine stump," an old ditch or a maple tree. These would be satisfactory as long as the bounds were renewed every year, but had no permanency. A careful study of the early grants leads us to conclude that the tract of land lying on the west side of Beaver Brook and north of the Merrimac River, comprising 500 acres, and extending far enough up the river to include a part of Pawtucketville, was set apart as an Indian Reservation. This was for the protection of the fishing rights of the Indians. After the close of King Philip's War, this tract was sold to Jonathan Tyng and Major Hinchman. They in turn sold to the inhabitants of Chelmsford, numbering about fifty. The three sons of Samuel Varnum, viz: Thomas, John and Joseph purchased these shares and became the sole owners. At a point near the water works gallery will be seen a small brook emptying into the Merrimac River. This is now called Clay Pit Brook, while on the plans drawn 250 years ago it was called "bare meadow brook." This was near the western line of the Indian Reservation, and the eastern bound of the Webb farm. This farm was bounded on the south and west by the Merrimac River, extending up the river a distance of three and one-quarter miles, and was roughly estimated at 1,000 acres, and was granted to Capt. James Oliver, Lieut. Peter Oliver, Capt. James Johnson and Ensign John Webb, of the Boston Ancient and Honorable Artillery.

The original plan of the grant is preserved at the Office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth with the following description:

June 7, 1659.

Laid out to Left peter Oliver Capt. James Oliver Capt. James Johnson and ensigne John Evered one thousand acc. of land in ye wilderness on ye Northern side of Merrimuk River: Lying about Nahamkeage being bounded with Merrimick Riv^t on ye South and on ye west; the wilderness elswher Surrounding according to marked trees: as bye a plott taken of the same is demonstrated.

By JONATHAN DANFORTH Survey^r.

Nahamkeage was sometimes spelt Naamkeek and means a fishing station.

A plan drawn according to the scale and compared with the maps in existence shows the west line reaching to the east bank of Tyng's Island. Some of this land is now overflowed by reason of the height of the dam at Pawtucket Falls, and the original channel has been lost. John Evered, for some reason, preferred to be known as John Webb, and buying the shares of his partners, he became the owner of the 1,000 acres. Previous to this time, either prompted by a spirit of philanthropy or shrewdly reckoning on securing a bargain, he paid a fine for an Indian, thus saving him from imprisonment, and purchased by consent of the General Court the island west of the property, then known as Wicosuck, now Tyng's Island. From a record in the Bay Colony the Indians were dissatisfied and presented a petition requesting that the ownership of the island should be restored to them. Realizing the good policy of keeping the Indians quiet, the General Court granted their petition, and to reimburse Webb they gave him a tract of 500 acres on the east side of Beaver Brook, in addition to the 1,000 acres lying upon the Merrimac River and the 500 acres on the east side of Beaver Brook, Webb with Varnum and Shatswell purchased the tract of 500 acres which on the 6th of June, 1663, had been granted to the Town of Billerica.

The Town of Billerica was in need of financial assistance, and the General Court granted it in different locations, tracts of land amounting to 4,000 acres. These tracts were sold and the money applied to the payment of the expenses of the town.

In 1664, Webb sold to Richard Shatswell and Samuel Varnum one-half of the farm which was originally granted to the Olivers, Johnson, and himself, and five years later Shatswell sold his share in this land to Major Thomas Hinchman, who, in 1671, sold to Edward Colburn, thus making Colburn and Varnum the owners of the tract. Hinchman describes it as "a part of the land Richard Shatswell purchased of Evered. It contained that whole tract of land that was the division of the said Richard Shatswell's at Merrimac River below, bounded between Coburn on the West and Samuel Varnum on the East."

A more definite description is given in the quaint language of the time in the deed of Thomas Hinchman to Edward Coburn, dated April 3, 1671:

"Lying and being within the bounds and limits of the place Dracut aforesaid being a part of that land which Richard Shatchell purchased of Mr. John Evered deceased it contains that wholl part of land that was the Division of ye S^d Shatchell at Merrimac below, bounded between ye S^d Coburn on the West and Samuel Varnum on the east. Also that parcell of meadow land lying at the great meadows comonly so called which by agreement between me, M^r Evered & Samuel Varnum aforesaid and Richard Shatchwell aforesaid fell to the share and part of the S^d Richard Shatswell in that place which parcell of meadow is not yet Divided betwene ye S^d Sam^l Varnum and Shatchell."

This was signed by Thomas and Elizabeth Hinchman, Elizabeth making her mark. It is signed in "the presents of us," Jonathan Danforth and Cornelius Waldo.

In September, 1668, Webb's widow sold all the property in Dracut remaining in his name to Edward Colburne. In this way Colburn came into possession of a large tract of land in the Wilderness north of the Merrimac, which later, upon the incorporation of the Town, became Dracut.

At this time King Philip, foreseeing the time when the red man must be driven from the homes of his fathers, was inciting the tribes to make war on the white people, and although Chelmsford and vicinity did not suffer as severely as the towns in Worcester County, still, roving bands would suddenly appear before the small settlements, and, killing the settlers and burning the buildings would suddenly disappear. In the year 1676, it is recorded that "At Chelmsford the Wamesit Indians about March 18 fell upon some houses on the north side of the river and burned down three or four that belonged to the family of Edward Colburn." In early histories of New England, we find the following record: "Chelmsford. Where were many deserted Houses burned in the Beginning of April 1676 belonging to one Ed. Colburn that had formerly purchased the Seat of Capt. Web."

Drake, in his Indian Wars, also says: "Mar. 18 1675 at Chelmsford the said Wamesit Indians fell upon some houses on the North side of the River, burnt down three or four that belonged to the family of Edward Colburn: the said Colburn with Samuel Varnum his Neighbor being pursued as they passed over the River to look after their Cattell on that Side of the River."

As the older sons of Edward were married before this date, we conclude that it was their houses which were destroyed. The Colburns and Varnums, while ready to defend their homes, were also ready to live peaceably with the Indians, often granting their requests and complying with their demands when they were under no legal obligation to do so; for we find the record of a deed from John Sagamore, an Indian of Natick, in which they paid him £300 in silver for certain lands in Dracut already owned by them and which were grants to the earlier owners by the English Government.

This Government claimed the right to dispose of these lands without recognizing the rights of the Indians. There were some of the tribes who would not surrender their rights without compensation. The settlers had cleared the land and built houses, and found it easier to make a money payment than to abandon the settlement, while forcible resistance was impossible. In a deed dated Apr. 4, 1701, John Thomas Sagamore, Minister of Natick, conveyed to Thomas, Daniel, Ezra, Joseph, John, and Robert Coburn, their sister, Hannah Richardson, widow, Thomas, John and Joseph Varnum, two or three thousand acres lying on Merrimac River. The west line was on Master Sewell's farm, from which it ran in a straight line to the north side of Long Pond, thence northeast to Beaver River, thence south by the river to a farm called Chelmsford land, thence by a crooked line to "Paw Tucket." This would include all the territory lying between Merrimac River, Tyngsboro, Pelham and Beaver Brook, excepting what was known as the Indian Reservation, which was the 500 acres lying in the angle formed by the Merrimac River and Beaver Brook, and which at that time was called Chelmsford Farm.

EDWARD COLBORNE.

Edward was the progenitor of the Colburn and Coburn families, who, two centuries ago, lived in eastern Massachusetts, but at the present time may be found in nearly every state in the Union, and which have representatives in Canada, Europe and Australia. Of his birthplace and early years we are ignorant. But we have reason to believe that his early home was in England, as we find in the list of emigrants sailing from London, the name of Edward Colburn. The records kept by the companies who furnished transportation show that early in the month of September, 1635, the ship "Defence," Capt. Bostock, arrived at Boston, October 30th, after a voyage lasting 54 days, having amongst the passengers, Edward Colbourne, whose age is given as 17 years. In the same list we find the name of Robert Colburn, whose age is given as 28 years, and they may have been brothers.

No records are found of the years following his arrival, but allusions are made in legal papers to Edward as being of Ipswich, and he is called Nathaniel Saltonstall's farmer, from which we conclude that he was the superintendent and manager of the estate of Nathaniel Saltonstall, who was a prominent citizen of that town. In proof of this, we find no record of his owning a farm until, with his family, he removed to Dracut.

Arriving at Boston, he journeyed to Ipswich, where he remained until his removal with his family to Dracut.

The early settlers of Ipswich intended to make that town the port of entry, and looked forward to the time when the town should become a large city, but were unable to complete their plans on account of a sand bar, which prevented their securing a harbor sufficient to receive the larger vessels.

The Saltonstalls, Richard and his son Nathaniel, settled early at Ipswich, and were extensive owners of real estate. It was through the influence of Nathaniel that Edward came to America, and reference is made to him in the History of Ipswich, as "Nathaniel Saltonstall's farmer."

This may account for the fact that he did not own a farm, and the inference is that, as his family increased, he realized the necessity of providing for them, and, knowing that the Webb farm laid on the river and was for sale, he purchased it and removed with his family to what is now Dracut, then an unnamed wilderness called, "The Wilderness North of the Merrimac." Here his sons grew to manhood and his daughters married, and amongst them Edward lived and died.

From the records of the County we learn that on May 20, 1648, he signed his name as a witness to a will, and sixteen years later, viz.: August, 1664, Richard Saltonstall conveyed to his son, Nathaniel, a "farm in Ipswich at the new medows containing by estimation eight hundred acres now in the occupation of Edward Colborne," from which we conclude that at one time he rented a farm from the Saltonstalls. From the same source we learn that with others he owned a tract of land off the Ipswich shore called Hog Island. In 1665, when the lines between Ipswich and Wenham were established, we find him a member of the committee whose duty it was to decide upon the location of these lines.

In 1668, he was appointed to appraise a stray horse. In this manner we learn where he was located. In 1668, we find the first change in the spelling of the name, as the final letter had at that time disappeared, leaving the name Colborn, and in 1671, when he sold land in Ipswich, "on the Wenham lyne," he spelled his name, Colburn. In 1694, the spelling is again changed, and the name Coburn appears, and at the present time his descendants are Colburns and Coburns.

The records of the Town of Ipswich were destroyed by fire about the year 1831, thus depriving us of exact dates of births of children. But from the County records, viz.: Probate records and registry of deeds, we gather some material for his early history.

His later life is so closely connected with the early history of Dracut that it may be found in the article with the title of the Webb Farm.

Gen. Philip Read, who has made a careful study of Dracut history, and who is a descendant of Edward¹ writes as follows:

"CORP. EDWARD COBURN.

(Sometimes Coburne, Colbron, Colebron, or Coulborne), 1618-1700, of Dunstable, Chelmers-ford, Chelmsford, Middlesex Co., Mass.

He was a soldier in the local Military Co. of Chelmsford during King Philip's War, 1675-77, was in command of Colbron's Garrison on the east side of the Merrimac as strengthened after the attack upon Chelmsford by the Indians 25 Feb. 1676 and continued in charge and pay until Nov. 17 1692, perhaps still longer. On that date Dunstable included Nashua, Nashville, Hollis, Hudson, Litchfield and Merrimac.

Corporal Edward Coburn was guarding the ferry 18 Mar. 1675 when the Wamesit Indians killed two of the sons of Samuel Varnum and burned the Corporals house. Was in command of local Garrison 23 July 1689 during the first French and Indian or King Williams war."

THE GARRISON HOUSE.

As Edward was the first settler on the north of the Merrimac, it was necessary to provide against the assaults of the Indians. They roamed through the woods and paddled their canoes on the river, and the lives of the white settlers were of no value to them. He erected a Garrison House, and, with his seven stalwart sons and his sons-in-law, he was able to protect himself from the thieving bands of Indians, while aid could be summoned in time of danger, when larger bands would be on the warpath. His Garrison House he left in his will to his son, Joseph, and there can be no doubt that it is still standing. On Varnum Avenue, nearly opposite Totman Road, is a two-story house, which was for many generations the home of the Coburns. The last to occupy it was Nathaniel B.⁷ and his sons, Edmund, Howard and Walter, and it passed out of the ownership of the Coburns. It has been known as the Garrison House for five generations, and the size of the timbers, the low posted rooms, and the style of building, all furnish evidence of its age. It has been remodeled, and changed by additions and demolition until but little of the original building can be found. The earlier settlers had no motive for calling it the Garrison House, unless it was one, and the later generations would not have originated the name, all of which proves it to be Edward Coburn's Garrison House.

As it is somewhat difficult for some people to trace relationship, a chart is prepared, which, if followed, will give it plainly.

2 DANIEL	brothers	EZRA	2
3 EDWARD	1st cousins	SAMUEL	3
4 EDWARD	2nd "	JONATHAN	4
5 ROGER	3rd "	THADDEUS	5
6 GILBERT	4th "	ZACHARIAH	6
7 SILAS R.	5th "	THOMAS D.	7
		ROCKWOOD	8

This shows relationship when all are in the same generation. When they are not, the relationship will be as follows:

Roger will be 5th cousin once removed from Zachariah, and twice removed from Thomas D., etc. Jonathan will be 4th cousin once removed from Roger, and twice removed from Gilbert, etc.

NOTE. All names of towns and cities not followed by the abbreviation of the state are understood to be located in Massachusetts.

The figures in the larger type give the family number which refers back to a corresponding number which shows the name of the parents. The figures in the smaller type placed at the left of the children's names refer forward to a corresponding number giving the number of his family.

As the earlier records of Ipswich were burned, the births of the first seven children can only be given as occurring about the years mentioned. Exact dates of births of Ezra, Joseph and Lydia have been found.

SECOND GENERATION.

2. EDWARD² COLBURN, JR., (Edward¹), born, 1642; died, Aug. 2, 1675.

In the absence of records, we are led to conclude that Edward, Jr., was one of the older sons. He was born at Ipswich, and came to Dracut with his father. He received, with his brothers, a share of the Webb farm, which, after his death, was deeded to his brother, Daniel. He was one of the company who served in King Philip's War, and from the history of Ipswich we learn that he was killed at Squakheage, Aug. 2, 1675. The account of the affray is found in the History of Worcester County, in that portion relating to the Town of Brookfield, called by the Indians, Squakheage. About the middle of July, 1675, a band of Nipmucs from King Philip's neighborhood murdered four or five people in the Town of Mendon.

The people of the neighboring towns were alarmed, fearing a general uprising, but the Indians expressed a desire for peace, and appointed a time and place for a treaty. The whites were in charge of Captains Wheeler and Hutchinson, who had with them twenty men. They were treacherously ambushed by a band of 200 Indians, and eight were killed and wounded; among them was Edward Coburn, Jr.

The survivors retreated to the shelter of a fort or garrison house, where they were besieged four days, being relieved by the arrival of Major Simon Willard with a company of soldiers who had heard of their danger.

"Brookfield or Squaboag was destroyed by the Indians Aug. 2 1675." A footnote adds, "There were then slain to our great grief eight Men namely Zechariah Phillips of Boston, Timothy Farlow of Billerica, Edward Coleborn of Chelmsford, &c."

3. JOHN² COLBURN, (Edward¹), born, 1644; married, Mar. 10, 1671; married Susannah, dau. of Capt. Thomas Reed of Salem, who died Jan. 3, 1739.

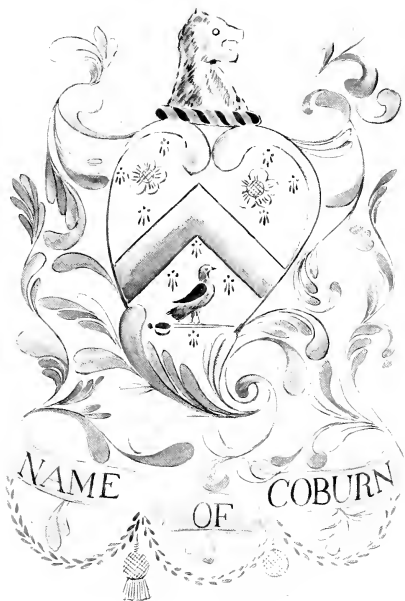

Children:

- i. MARY, b. Oct. 23, 1671.
9. ii. JOHN.
- iii. ELIZABETH, b. April 8, 1679; m. April 10, 1700, Joseph Spalding, b. Oct. 22, 1675.
10. iv. JOSEPH, b. June 26, 1680.
11. v. ROBERT, b. Jan. 28, 1682.
- vi. SARAH, b. Dec. 8, 1685; m. Nov. 22, 1709, Joseph Butterfield.
- vii. LYDIA, b. Dec. 14, 1687.
- viii. HANNAH, b. June 10, 1689; m. John Littlehale.
12. ix. WILLIAM, b. June 17, 1693.

His father, while living, divided his land between his sons and, owning land which laid upon the north side of the river he was able to give to each one a river lot. In 1671, he deeded to John one-eighth of the land purchased of John Evered, alias Webb, containing 17 acres and 20 poles, "right against the new barn bounded by Robert on both sides, the river south and highway north, reserving one-half acre about the new barn with convenient highway to new barn." As the same reference is made to the new barn in the deeds granted to the other sons, we infer that it was built large enough for their use, and the half acre which was reserved and the highway would be common land. The site of the barn cannot be located, but the half acre lay on the north of the highway. In addition to this Webb land, he deeded one-eighth of the remainder of his land, together with one-quarter part of the new barn. If a further division is made, the land must be divided by lottery. For this property John is bound to pay £55 Sterling, making a yearly payment of £5 for the period of eleven years.

"All and every of the several payments to be in kind and manner and in all sorts and equal proportions of payment according to covenant wherein the said Edward standeth bound to the aforesaid Webb and his assignees."

4. ROBERT² COLBURN, (Edward¹), born in Ipswich about 1647; died at Concord, June 17, 1701; married, Mar. 16, 1669, Mary Bishop of Chelmsford.

In 1678, Edward conveyed to Robert one-eighth of the Webb purchase, viz.: 11 acres, 60 poles, bounded by John's land on the west, and his brother Edward's, now deceased, on the east and lying on the river. The terms of the sale were the same as those imposed upon John: £5 yearly for a term of eleven years, with the same conditions regarding the kind of payment.

Robert and John did not share with the others in the Satchell land, although each had his share in the Webb purchase. May 27, 1700, the year before his death, he sold his real estate in Dracut to his brother, Daniel, and is called a "Resident of Dracut."

5. THOMAS² COLBURN, (Edward¹), born at Ipswich about 1648, and died before 1728; married (1) Aug. 6, 1672, Hannah Rouf or Rolfe. He married (2) Nov. 17, 1681, Remembrance (Underwood) Richardson.

Feb. 22, 1671, his father deeded to him one-eighth of the Evered land, and in 1693, he had an equal share with his brothers, Daniel, Ezra and Joseph, "by me purchased of Major Thomas Hinchman, which land is known by the name of the Satchell land."

This land was purchased by Edward¹ of Major Thomas Hinchman, April 3, 1671, the original deed being now in existence. A later deed bearing the date of 1699, from Edward, informs us that, "In consideration of the help and servicableness which my son Thomas hath yeilded to me in my age and weakness and which I am willing to recompense him for have given. two acres of land in tillage which is part of my home lot. adjoining the land of Joseph Coburn."

6. DANIEL² COLBURN, (Edward¹), born about 1654, at Ipswich; died, Aug. 1, 1712; married, June 18, 1685, Sarah, dau. of Robert and Elizabeth (Willard) Blood of Concord, who was born at Concord, Aug. 1, 1658, and died June 1, 1741.

- ix. MARY, b. ———; m. ——— Harriss.

He lived during the first ten years of his marriage in Dracut, but in 1697, having purchased land in Concord, his wife's early home, he removed to that town, where the births of his three youngest children are recorded. He also purchased, in 1710, land in Concord of his brother-in-law, Samuel Blood, while the appraisal of his estate, March 31, 1713, has reference to Daniel Colburn of Dracut. In 1682, his father conveyed to him one-eighth part of the Evered or Webb purchase, which was the part formerly granted to his brother Edward, who, in 1675, seven years previous, had been killed by the Indians, no disposition having been made of this land until that time, and in 1693, shared equally in the Satchell land with his brothers, Thomas, Ezra and Joseph. The children, with the exception of the youngest, Mary, who married a Harris, settled in Dracut, where many of their descendants are living at the present time.

7. EZRA² COLBURN, (Edward¹), born at Ipswich, March 16, 1658; died in Dracut, June, 1739; married, Nov. 22, 1681, Hannah, born May 22, 1661, dau. of Samuel and Sarah (Langton) Varnum of Ipswich.

His home was in Dracut, and on July 12, 1682, he received the title to one-eighth of the Evered-Webb purchase. Eleven years afterward, he shared with the three brothers in the division of the Shatswell or Satchell land. He received other portions of his father's land, on the Merrimac River and in "Bare" Meadow. His children are recorded in Chelmsford as being born in what was later named Dracut.

8. JOSEPH² COLBURN, (Edward¹), born at Ipswich, June 16, 1661; died in Dracut, Nov. 13, 1733. He married (1) Hannah _____, who died Sept. 11, 1721.

He married (2), July 5, 1726, Deborah (Stevens), widow of Joseph Wright.

In 1682, when twenty-one years of age, he received his share of the Webb purchase, one-eighth part, and eleven years later, with his three brothers, came into possession of the Satchell land. He was the one selected to care for his parents in their declining years, as the wording of a deed shows, dated 1690. "For divers causes me thereunto moving especially in consideration of that care to provide for me and for my dear wife so long as it shall please God to continue both or either of us in this life I do convey unto my son Joseph Colburn my old dwelling house in said Dracut and upon my farm thereon, which was the Garrison House, and which he is actually possessed of. Together with a half part of my lot of land to said house adjoining to the land of my son Ezra Coburn, the said land lying northeast and up the river. It is the half part of that latter field which is commonly called the Barn Field."

He was prominent in town affairs holding the office of selectman from 1712 to 1721, quartermaster in 1716, fence viewer in 1714 and 1715, and surveyor in 1716.

- v. LEVI, b. March 12, 1735.
- vi. ELIZABETH, b. July 9, 1743.

William was one of the residents of Dracut who was granted a share in the Reserved Land. At the time when the grants were made, before the Coburns and Varnums came to Dracut, there were several tracts of land which, upon the incorporation of the town, came into its possession.

These were known as the "Reserved Lands," and were at different times parceled out to settlers. Until 1715, the locations of these lots and their boundaries were unsatisfactory, and in the year mentioned a committee, consisting of George Brown of Billerica, Capt. Joseph Varnum, Ezekiel Cheever, Nathaniel Fox and James Fales, was appointed to adjust the difficulty.

It was a difficult matter, and their final report was made and is recorded in a book called "The Proprietors' Record," now at the Dracut town office.

Each lot owner's location is given, and every one bears the same date, March 25, 1721.

We find in this book that William Coburn had 20 acres of meadow, upland, and swamp land lying at the head of Walker's Brook. This has been identified as a brook draining certain meadows in east Dracut, and running through Methuen to the Merrimac River.

There is evidence to prove that he lived in that part of the town. He held the offices of constable, fence viewer, etc., and owned rights in the river which were valuable for fishing purposes.

13. EDWARD³ COBURN (Robert,² Edward¹), baptized Sept. 4, 1670, at Beverly; married, March 19, 1694, Sarah Hayward, dau. of Nathaniel of Beverly; married (2) Mercy Butterick of Concord, dau. of Thomas and Dorothy (Edmunds) Hett, and widow of William Butterick, born Sept. 19, 1680

Until 1709, his home was at Salem, when, with three others, he purchased 100 acres in Connecticut, on Little River, which was at that time a remote section, but afterward included in the Town of Hampton.

From there, in 1713, he removed to Windham, Conn., where he was living in 1730, as on July 3d of that year he was admitted to the Church as a member.

A petition to the Probate Court in 1741, gives an approximate date of his death, and mentions Mercy, his wife, as still living. The later years of his life were spent at Concord, Mass., where he died.

14. EBENEZER³ COBURN (Robert,² Edward¹), born 1676; died Dec. 27, 1749; married Sarah Storer, dau. of Joseph and Hannah Storer of York, Me., who was born Dec. 9, 1682, and died Jan. 21, 1770.

there to Elizabeth Conant; intentions published Sept. 21, 1700. She was dau. of John and Bethia (Mansfield) Conant, who was born Jan. 14, 1682.

- v. REBECCA, b. April 7, 1720; m. Amos Davis.

His home was in the Town of Bedford, which, until 1728, was a part of Concord. The settlement where he and others lived was called Winthrop Farm, and at that date, 1728, Benjamin, with seventeen others, signed a petition for a town, which was granted, as the first town meeting was held Oct. 6, 1729, at which time he was chosen fence viewer. In 1732, a deed from Richard Wheeler to Benjamin Coburn refers to him as a resident of Bedford.

Brown's History of Bedford calls his wife Elizabeth, dau. of Benjamin Wooley.

17. JOSEPH³ COBURN (Robert,² *Edward*¹) was born in Beverly; baptized March 13, 1681; died Sept. 21, 1758; married in Concord, Jan. 26, 1708, Hannah Harwood, who died Nov. 14, 1760.

This seems to be incorrect, as we find in the County records, the following entry: "Feb. 29, 1715, Joseph French, Lieut. of Concord to my son in law William Colburn of the same and my daughter Margaret, his wife, in consideration of the good will, &c."

His home was on Varnum Avenue, as in Dracut town records we find this entry: "Voted to build a schoolhouse on land of Deacon Edward Coburn and between his house and the house of Samuel Coburn."

As the date of the erection of the old schoolhouse on Varnum Avenue is 1755, the same year in which this vote was taken, we know that his home was near the schoolhouse, on the south side of Varnum Avenue.

He had large real estate transactions, owning at one time the one-fourth part of the Roger Conant grant of 200 acres, lying partly in New Boston Village in Dracut, and which he conveyed to his son-in-law, Jonathan Crosby, whose descendants still occupy the territory.

During this period slaves were owned in the state, and Mr. Coburn needing assistance in his large family bought, in Boston, a young negress called Dinah. She was brought to Dracut by him on horseback, and was always known as "Dinah Tim."

She always remained with the family, and at her death was supposed to be nearly 100 years old. Provision was made for her support by Mr. Coburn, who appreciated her devotion to the family. Naturally, her reasoning powers were limited. When quite old and unable to work, the daughters of the family were one day preparing to weave some checked cloth for aprons. Dinah requested them to weave some for her. Upon inquiry as to the use she could make of it, she said she wanted it to use when she picked beans. "But where," they said, "will you pick beans?" "In Heaven," she answered. At another time she was seen sticking pine needles in the ground, giving as a reason, that they would grow and be pine trees. Upon Mr. Coburn's telling her they would not grow, she said, "Have faith, sonny, have faith."

196. ix. ROGER, b. May 19, 1765.

In 1747, he was a resident of Dracut, and in 1769 he was at Pelham, where his younger children were born.

His farm in Pelham lay on the Old Stage Road, the South Line, a few rods north of the State Line. He was an owner of a large tract of land, selling the farm on the south to his son Elijah, one on the Jericho Road in Pelham to his son Benjamin, one on the Old Stage Road to his son-in-law, Ezekiel Richardson, and retaining the home farm for his youngest son, Roger, where he died.

He was a soldier in the French and Indian War, as we find his name in a list with the title.

"A List of Captin Jonathan Butterfeilds Mens Names ages Places Born Place of Rezedents Occupation Dated at Fort Edwards July ye 26 A. D. 1756.

Edward Colburn 30 Dracout Pelham Husbandman hired."

A letter to him from his wife, dated Sept. 29, 1756, is directed to "Mr. Edward Coburn in the army against Crown Point," and a receipt, dated Oct., 1756, is written from the Camp at Lake George. Returning to his home, he enlisted from Pelham to serve in the Revolution, with his two oldest sons and three of his sons-in-law.

We have few records of his life in the army. A pass to West Point, dated Aug. 29, '79, signed by Elias Stillwell, Captain, and Ezra Badlam, Lt. Col., commanding, and a paper showing his discharge give what facts are in existence. The discharge is dated "Bennington, Sept. 12, 1777," and gives as a reason, "unfit for duty." As the Battle of Bennington was fought Aug. 16, 1777, he was probably wounded or injured by over-exertion. He was an active man, and a noted bear hunter. He was buried on the farm, as was the custom then, but removed, in 1848, to the private burial ground, where his descendants are buried.

79. DANIEL⁴ COBURN (Edward,³ Daniel,² *Edward*¹), born Jan. 23, 1723, and died May 12, 1755; married Deborah Coburn, dau. of Aaron and Mercy (Varnum) Coburn; published Nov. 29, 1753; She was born Sept. 24, 1727; they dwelt in Dracut, where he died, and the widow married Timothy Coburn.

His home was in Pelham, N. H., where, in 1769, his name is on a petition for a county.

Reference to the New Hampshire State papers shows that he received, in 1781, the appointment of First Major of Col. Thornton's Regt. As this was during the War of the Revolution, he was undoubtedly a soldier in the war. While his name does not appear in the Pelham list, his enlistment might have been in a neighboring town.

It is now standing, and is one of the old landmarks of the town, is in good repair, and the old part retains nearly all of its original features.

When built, the east side or rear of the building had no windows, as it could be more easily defended if attacked by the Indians. There is a tradition that Mrs. Coburn stayed alone in the house one night with only a large dog, while twenty Indians were in sight of the house, and at the birth of her first child, she was obliged to stay at the Garrison House, on account of the danger of an attack by the savages.

In 1792, they came to Canaan, Maine, where the second dau., Deborah, wife of John Emery, lived. She and her husband received them in their home, and John Emery, who was one of the early settlers of Canaan, gave his father-in-law 50 acres of the grant he himself had received from the Kennebec Company. Eleazer Coburn soon built a log house near the Emery's, where the family lived till Eleazer the second, at the time of his marriage, built the first frame house on the same spot. her numerous grandchildren, by whom she was adored. In her last years she was blind, but was always alert in mind and quick in sympathy. Her room was the first place sought by the grandsons, returning from the woods or from college, and they received from her, overflowing sympathy with all their interests.

George Simeon, son of Simeon⁵ early developed a love of mechanical work. At the age of 24, he was employed in a factory devoted to the manufacture of furniture. He realized the need of better machinery for the treatment of cane, and his fertile brain soon devised such machines.

In 1857, he entered the employ of Cyrus Wakefield, and by the further improvement in machinery the business increased, and a company formed, called "The Wakefield Rattan Co." Too close application impaired his health, and he purchased a farm at Lancaster, where he remained until 1875.

Dissatisfied with farm life, he returned to the factory, locating at Gardner with Heywood Bros., where he again commenced the treatment of cane, and where he remained until he retired from active business to enjoy freedom from business cares.

He took out a large number of patents for cane machinery, which still continue to be in use, and for simplicity and neatness of work, have not been superseded by any other kind. His closing years were spent at his home in Gardner.

1780. Lieutenant, Capt. Peter Comb's Co., Prince's Regt.

Jan. 27, 1781. Lieutenant under Brig. Gen. Wadson, detached at Camden for service at the Eastward.

In company with one Mr. Ayres, he went to Maine, settling in the wilderness in 1773, they being the only white settlers north of Bangor. The location is now the Town of Orono. The Penobscot Indians were the owners and occupants of the land, but they received permission from them to clear land and erect mills.

The business prospered until 1775, when the English Government sent soldiers to compel the people of the settlements to give their allegiance to the King, the penalty for refusal being imprisonment and confiscation of property. Mr. Ayres and some others accepted the terms, but Mr. Coburn and his son refused, saying that they would rather have the tyrant's chain about their necks and look out through their prison windows than to be false to their country. Realizing their peril, they buried their bedding, crockery, and everything they were unable to carry away, in a dry place, and the family escaped through the woods to Fort Winslow at Pittston, on the Kennebec, where they were in safety. From Pittston, they removed to Camden, where the father, with his two sons seventeen and fifteen years of age, enlisted. He was placed in charge of the stores and ammunition, but one dark night a company of British soldiers surprised them and took the father prisoner; but the sons, jumping from a chamber window, escaped. One of the muskets, carried by the boys that night, is still the possession of their descendants. He was afterwards exchanged and returned to his home, but the sons remained in the service until the close of the war. They then returned to Orono, but their buildings, including their mills, had been destroyed. Their household effects which they had buried were found to be uninjured, and they at once erected new buildings. The remainder of his life was spent quietly on the farm, cared for by his son William during his declining years.

attended the Convention at Falmouth, Me., in 1786, as delegate to determine whether or not the Province of Maine should become a separate state. At the outbreak of the Revolution, he signed, July 13, 1775, a petition of the Committee of Safety.

He entered the army, arriving at Cambridge, Aug. 13, 1775. He commanded a company of Indians who had volunteered, but Washington, by early experience of this nation, fearing treachery, declined to accept their services.

He owned a shipyard on the Kennebec River, where he built the batteaux by contract to transport army supplies and munitions of war to Quebec in Arnold's Expedition, which he accompanied. In Gen. Washington's account book of receipts and expenditures now preserved at the Patent Office at Washington, D. C., we find the following entry:

"Aug. 20 1775 paid Reuben Colburn 10 pounds."

"Sep. 7 " " " " 16 " 8 shillings."

This was all the pay he received, although in his efforts he went to Mt. Vernon on horseback, arriving there the day after Washington's death.

The army started for Quebec in vessels from Newburyport, and in seven days arrived at the mouth of the Kennebec River, where they were in the vicinity of Major Coburn, who entertained at his house, Gen. Arnold and his officers. The building is still standing, and the room may be seen in which Arnold slept.

At another time, two men connived to get a turkey from the old hayseed farmer. One of them came up to Bradstreet's wagon and said, "What is the price of your pigs?" "Pigs! Can't you tell a pig from a turkey?" said Bradstreet. "Why," said the stranger, "it is a pig. If it is, you shall give it to me; if it is not I'll pay you for it, and we will leave it to the first man who comes along." And, as another man just then appeared around the corner, he hailed him. "Here, Sir, what do you call this?" holding up the fowl. "A pig," said he, "don't you know what a pig is?" Thereupon, Bradstreet seized him and hung him up by his trousers on the meat hook.

Eleazer Coburn was born in Tyngsboro, Mass., and when fifteen years old, came with his father's family to that part of Canaan, Maine, which was afterwards Bloomfield, and is now included in Skowhegan. He went to work for Samuel Weston, afterwards his father-in-law, at that time the principal surveyor of the region, and a leading man in the community. He learned of him the surveying business, and became one of the most prominent land surveyors of his day. The virgin forests of the State were just beginning to find a market, and, as a preliminary to sale, needed to be "run out." For this service he had exceptional qualifications, and was in the front rank of his profession. He was an expert as to the relative value of the various sections he was employed to explore and survey, and was enabled to make choice purchases at the low figures then charged by the State. In 1830, in partnership with his sons, Abner and Philander, he began lumbering on the Kennebec River, and the firm, under the name of E. Coburn & Sons conducted a prosperous business. The business was continued after the father's death under the name of A. & P. Coburn.

Eleazer Coburn, or Squire Coburn, as he was generally called, was for forty years one of the most prominent men of his section, a position which he owed to his strong common sense, his business sagacity, and his unusual force of character. With scanty early education, he made the best use of his opportunities, and was counted among the best informed men of his day. He studied the legal books in the library of his father-in-law, which fell to him at the death of the latter, and became well versed in the principles of the law. He was appointed Justice of the Peace when a young man, and at a period when it was not customary to call on ministers for that service, he performed many marriages. He was selectman of Canaan, 1800, 1802-09, and first selectman, 1811 and 1813. He was first selectman of Bloomfield the year it was incorporated, 1814, and also in 1815 and 1816. He represented his district in the General Court of Mass., in 1812, 1813 and 1814. When Maine became a State in 1820, he was a member of the Constitutional Convention at Portland, and was sent to Maine House of Representatives 1820, 1821, 1826, 1829, 1831. He was connected with the Federalist and Whig parties in politics. He was on the Board of Trustees of Bloomfield Academy, and was Trustee of Waterville College from 1836 till his death.

*Fidelia, born Feb. 2, 1805; married, at Waterloo, Canada West, Oct. 6, 1847, Rev. John S. Brooks; died at York, Sierra Leone, Africa, January 11, 1850. She was educated at Winthrop Academy, and was for a number of years a successful teacher in her home town. She was for seven years, 1842-1849, a missionary among the fugitive slaves in Queen's Bush, Canada. In 1849, she went with her husband as a missionary to the Mendi in West Africa, but died of fever before reaching her station. She was a woman of strong character, vigorous in mind and body, devotedly religious and self-sacrificing to the limit of endurance.

CAPT. GILBERT COBURN

Eleazer Coburn was a man of great natural ability, and of remarkable personality. He was an active and exemplary member of the Baptist church, and one of its chief pillars. He was one of the foremost in organizing a temperance society in Bloomfield, and was its president for several years. He was president of the County Temperance Society, and said he considered it the most honorable office he ever held. He was the first president of the first agricultural society in the County. In his later years he was an ardent abolitionist, and at one time went with a friend to make abolitionist speeches in neighboring towns. It is said that he was a more ready and effective speaker than any of his sons. He possessed a shrewd wit, and was a hearty laugh, as were all the family. As a father, he did not practice the stern discipline usual in his generation, but was gentle with his younger children, and like an older brother with his grown-up sons, advising with them on terms of equality as they came into manhood. He was kind hearted and liberal, and many stories are told of his sometimes quixotic generosity. He had the faculty of attaching his friends to him, so that many years after his death he was spoken of by aged men in terms of tender affection.

Mrs. Coburn was a strenuous worker, as she had need to be to conduct her household. Besides her fourteen children, thirteen of whom lived to maturity, several boys were brought up in the family. A sister of her husband, with two sons, found a home there, as well as the aged grandmother. The tailoress was in the home nearly the year round, and the shoemaker spent several weeks there each fall. The family was seldom less than twenty, and there was always room for another. The mother, like her neighbors, spun and wove her own blankets, sheets and towels, made her own butter, cheese, candles, soap, etc., and knit her family's hosiery. No wonder she learned to use every moment, and in her old age was never seen without work in her hands. With all her labors, she found time to go to church regularly, and to minister to the needy of the community.

He was a soldier in the War of 1812-15, and was present at the blowing up of Fort Erie. He would relate how the British Commander gave out that he would eat supper in Fort Erie, or in hell. When the British captured the fort and entered it, a mine was exploded by the Americans. He would tell what an awful sight it was to see the air full of legs, arms, bodies, and fragments of the fort.

When he first settled, near the mouth of the White River in Vermont, bears were numerous, and did a good deal of harm in destroying his corn. One dark night, he heard the beasts in his corn patch. He took his gun, and, creeping along till he saw a dark object, he fired. Just then, another bear, close by him, struck the gun, an old Queen's Arm, and broke off a piece of the stock. The gun was kept by the family for many years, as an heirloom.

In his advanced years, Mr. Colburn lost the sight of one eye, by a chip striking it, while he was chopping logs.

His wife was one of the best of women, as the following authentic anecdote will illustrate. One night, during the temporary absence of her husband, she heard the noise of an intruder in her storeroom. Hastily lighting a candle, she arrived at the storeroom, ere the culprit could escape with his plunder. He saved himself, but left a pair of leather breeches, common in those days, filled with salt, a very scarce article. Mrs. Colburn emptied one-half of the salt back in the barrel, and set the breeches, with one leg full of salt, outside the door, which she securely barred. She said she knew he must be in want, or he would not be so bold, and she was willing to divide with him.

He was a pensioner at Hartford, Vt., aged 78, Census of 1840.

Mr. Colburn's birth occurred in Boston while it was a town and before its incorporation as a city.

He attended the public schools of the town, and we have no record of his school life elsewhere.

His first occupation was that of clerk in a hat store on Washington St. His strict attention to business and thorough knowledge of his duties enabled him to succeed to the business at the age of twenty-five.

His honesty in dealing with customers made him successful in the business, which he conducted for twelve years. In 1853, he was appointed by President Pierce one of the U. S. Appraisers in the Custom House for the Port of Boston. He brought to the office the principles of honesty and faithfulness to duty which had governed his actions in his earlier life.

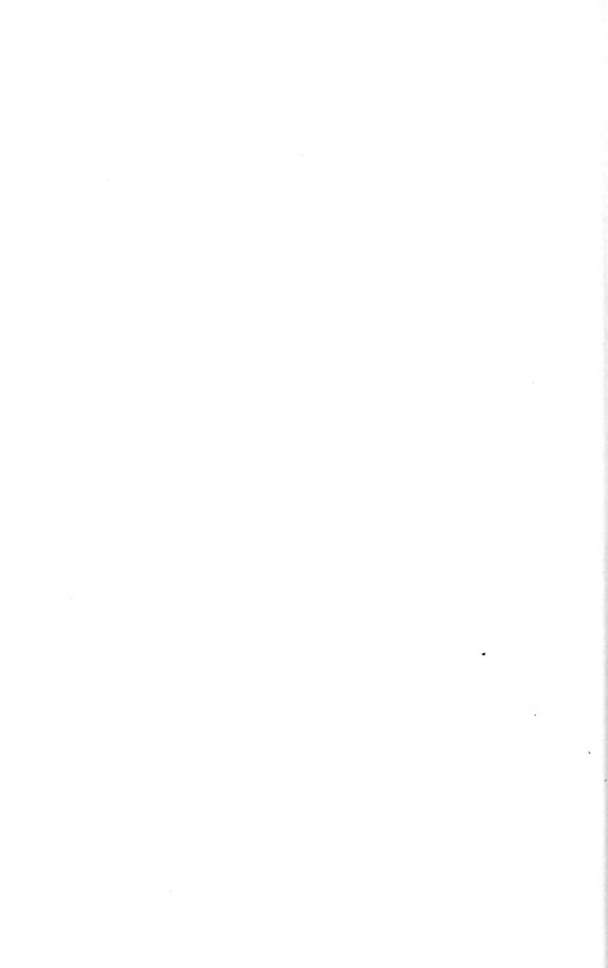

He retired from office in June, 1861, after which he engaged in no regular business. When a schoolboy, he developed a taste for collecting old coins, and his time was devoted to the work after leaving the Appraisers' office.

In 1860, with others who were interested in numismatics, he formed the Boston Numismatic Society, of which he was at first a Vice-President, and in 1865 became President, an office which he held until his death. In 1870, he was one of the committee of the Society to assume the publication of the American Journal of Numismatics. This work had been carried on under several names, but had not been successful, but through the energy and persistent effort of Mr. Colburn, it became the leading paper on this subject.

In proof of his abilities, a brief list of his duties as an officer are appended: Resident member, in 1857, of the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Society, serving on committees of publication, finance and library, the two last as Chairman. For twenty-seven years a member of the Board of Directors and member of the Registers' Club, which, for ten years, bore the financial responsibility of publishing the Register. He was one of the founders of the Prince Society for "preserving and extending the knowledge of American history," of which he was first the Vice-President and afterward Treasurer. One of the founders and life members of the Boston Antiquarian Club, afterward known as the Bostonian Society. He was a member of at least five State Historical Societies, corresponding member of the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Philadelphia, honorary member of American Numismatic and Archaeological Society of New York, and foreign associate of the Royal Belgian Numismatic Society. It has been truly said of him, "He was an honest and upright man in every respect," and "his charming manners and agreeable ways will long be remembered, and his loss felt in many circles."

Dr. Colburn was born at Hudson, N. H., and attended the public schools of his native town.

Making the choice of the profession of physician, he entered the Medical Department at Harvard College, where he graduated in 1823.

He located first in his own town, but foreseeing in the growing village of Nashua, a larger field in which to work, he removed there and remained in that city during his life. His reputation extended to the neighboring towns, and his practice obliged him to travel about these towns, journeys which he performed on horseback. As a physician, he was skillful, and took a place in the front rank of his profession. As a man, he was broad minded and philanthropic, sympathetic, and ready to assist in all good causes. He lived an honorable and useful life, fulfilling the duties in a manner acceptable to everyone.

He was elected Trustee of the Nashua Literary Institute, in which he had a deep interest. When the Gas Light Company was incorporated, he was one of the first to occupy the President's chair, and by his good judgment helped to advance the work.

He was a devout member of the Unitarian Church at Nashua, and a member of the Rising Sun Lodge A. F. and A. M., holding the office of Master in 1843 and 1844.

Was one of the pioneer settlers of Manchester, N. H., where he spent his active life of thirty years in successful professional practice.

Zaccheus was born at Hudson, N. H., then known as Nottingham West. He received at the schools in the town his early education, and, being of a studious disposition, he entered the Derry Academy at Derry, N. H. We infer from the records that his Academy life was not continuous, as the next year we find him at the Atkinson Academy, Atkinson, N. H., and Bradford Academy, Bradford, Mass.

The people of Hudson in those days were nearly all engaged in farming, and it is probable that he was needed on the farm during the busy season.

Having a strong desire to enter college, he received private instruction from Rev. Andrew E. Thayer, and in 1824 became a member of Brown University, graduating in 1827. Choosing the medical profession, he studied medicine during his last year in college, continuing his studies with Dr. John C. Warren of Boston, and attending lectures at Harvard College. In 1829, he received from Bowdoin College, Me., the degree of M. D. His first practice was with his brother Elijah, who was then practicing at Nashua, N. H., where he remained two years, removing to Hudson, N. H., in 1831, where for the next seven years he was the only physician in town. Desiring a larger field of operation, he removed to Manchester, N. H., where for one year he was city physician and member of the Board of Health. He became interested in the discovery of gold in California in 1848, and four years later he removed there and engaged in mining, but, like many others, finding it unprofitable, he opened an office for the practice of medicine in North San Juan, Nevada Co. In 1859, he returned to Manchester, where he remained until his death, which occurred in 1864. He suffered for several years with a tumor in his mouth, which caused his death.

Born on the old homestead of his father, Gen. Simon Coburn, which was, originally, a part of the Gen. Varnum farm in Dracut, Geo. W. Coburn passed all of his early years there, moving to what is now Lowell when about fifty-four years of age. His education was obtained in the district school near his home, at the old Centralville Academy, and, during one or two terms, at Bradford Academy. From this he passed to the occupation of teaching school in his native town during the winter seasons.

His natural and inherited aptitude for public business soon called him to such positions as were in the gift of the town. In addition to others, he was, for many years, one of the selectmen and moderator at most of the town meetings.

In the sessions of 1853 and 1854, he represented the town in the General Court, and while there, introduced and pushed through the legislation which resulted in the prohibition of the use of public funds for sectarian schools in this Commonwealth.

When the U. S. Internal Revenue system was organized in 1862, he was appointed an Assistant Assessor and afterwards Deputy Collector, which places he held for a term amounting to 16 years, and his accounts were never once challenged. He was for a long time one of the Trustees of the Estate of John Nesmith, and from 1862 up to the date of his death, maintained an office in the building, which bears the name of Nesmith, at 65 Merrimack Street.

He often acted as referee in cases of disputes, and was much consulted by widows and orphans in trouble. Many wills were drawn by him for Dracut people and others of his acquaintance. It is related that a certain Judge of Probate, seeing one that was in his handwriting, remarked that it was hardly necessary to examine it.

In his youth he identified himself with the Temperance movement, taking the pledge, which he was never known to violate.

He did service in the Militia for some years, joining the old Mechanics Phalanx at the age of nineteen.

In politics, he was, in his earlier days, an adherent of the Jeffersonian Democracy, of which his grandfather was a disciple, but when the slavery issue became dominant, he abandoned that party and enlisted in the Republican party at its formation, adhering to its fortunes for the remainder of his days.

He was a lover of nature and a close observer of her phenomena, getting thereby, a reputation as a weather prophet. His fondness for flowers was marked.

At the age of twenty-three, he was married to Mary Bamford, a native of Maine, who proved a devoted wife and mother. She survived him some four years, and of the five children born to them, four were living at the time of his death, from a sudden attack of heart disease, in Dec., 1888. A favorite niece wrote, on learning of his death, "A better man never lived."

In personal appearance, he somewhat resembled his maternal grandfather, Gen. Joseph Bradley Varnum, of local fame, being a handsome man of dignified bearing and retiring disposition, inclining to shyness.

Entering the army, he was appointed Sutler of the 20th Maine Regt., and served three years. Upon his return he was appointed Custom House Officer for Penobscot Co., and he also held the office of United States Marshal. In 1873, he removed to Michigan, where he again resumed the hotel business. During Cleveland's administration, he was postmaster of the city in which he lived. He has held civil offices in his city, serving to the satisfaction of the people. He served a term as councilman.

Mr. Coburn was born at Sumner, Me., and removed with his parents to Lincoln, Me., where he remained until he attained his majority. For a time he taught school, but, as the possibilities of the Middle States began to be known, he was employed to explore the wilds of Michigan to locate pine timber lands. In 1854, he removed to Georgetown, S. C., where he became foreman of a lumber mill, the operatives being slaves. The firm became financially embarrassed, and he was sent to Florida to collect money due them.

Becoming convinced that the locality was favorable, he became the landlord of a hotel, which he managed until the Southern States withdrew from the Union. He remained a short time at the South to superintend the erection of a mill for Gov. Allerton, but, as the South was impressing every able-bodied man into the service, and his sympathies were with the North, he refused a commission offered him by Gov. Allerton, secured a canoe and succeeded in reaching the U. S. Gunboat which lay off the coast. In an interview with Com. Du Pont, he explained his situation, and a boat was sent ashore for his family, and they returned to Maine.

Later, with his brother Hannibal, he entered into business at Washington, D. C., as Sutler, where he remained until the close of the war. He afterward became a merchant. Removing to Michigan, he again entered the hotel business, engaging in the amusement business, became a prospector and miner, finally purchasing a ranch in Dakota Ter., where he remained until his death.

Mr. Coburn's ancestry was distinctly that of Dracut's early families. The second in line married a Richardson, the third married a dau. of John Coburn, the fourth, a dau. of Capt. Wm. Richardson, the fifth, a Butterfield; all of these were early settlers of the town. In keeping with his forbears, he chose for a wife Rhoda Parker.

Mr. Coburn's life was uneventful. He was born on a farm and upon the completion of his school life, entered at once upon the occupation of farming. His skill and good judgment made him successful in his business, and the firm name of H. A. & S. A. Coburn was a guarantee for upright and honorable dealing.

Mr. Coburn's tastes led him to pursue the occupation of a trader. Although his birthplace was on a farm and his ancestors were farmers, he preferred mercantile life. Upon leaving school, he found employment in the store owned by Phineas Whiting. After a brief apprenticeship, he entered Scripture's bakery, where he learned the business and became the owner of a plant on School St. Preferring the grocery business, he located on Central St., but, realizing the limitations of the trade and having larger ambitions, he disposed of his business and entered, as clerk, a store on Dutton St., the firm dealing in manufacturers' supplies. He soon became a member of the firm, and in 1850 purchased the interest of his partners, and later two of his sons were members of the firm, and for many years the business was conducted under the name of C. B. Coburn & Co. In 1880, they moved to the store on Market St., which since that time has been the headquarters of the business. He was interested in the affairs of the city, serving for several years as councilman, and later as a member of the Board of Aldermen. He was at one time a Director and President of the Traders and Mechanics Ins. Co., and held the same offices in the Prescott Bank. He was a man honored and respected by everyone. As a merchant, he was upright and honest in his dealings with his fellowmen, and as a private citizen, he was one who never sought office, and was content to be at peace with all men.

Mr. Coburn was one of four brothers who spent their life in the vicinity of Lowell, and whose influence for the good of the community abides with us, although they have passed away. Like his older brother, the life of a farmer appealed to him and he followed it as a life work. While not seeking office, he was elected in 1847 to the Common Council. Quiet and unassuming, he was a type of a sturdy New Englander.

Captain Gilbert spent his life on the farm where he was born and which was reclaimed from the wilderness by his grandfather, Edward.⁴ His education was limited, receiving only such as was to be obtained in the district schools of the time. Until he arrived at manhood, he remained on the farm, learning the lessons of a farmer's life, which were of value to him in after years. He was elected Captain of a Company in Pelham, N. H., in the N. H. Militia, where, at that time, service was an obligation. He resigned the office in 1828. He held important offices in the gift of the town.

He was selectman for several years, and held the minor offices of surveyor and prudential committee in the school district.

He was appointed a justice of the peace for the County of Hillsborough, in which office he continued until his death.

In 1846, he was elected to the office of Representative to the General Court at Concord, N. H., a position which he held during two terms. In addition to his farming, he supplied large quantities of ships' knees for the shipyards at Newburyport. These were taken from the trunk of the oak tree, and, having attached a root which was large and sound, the shape made it suitable for ship-builders to use underneath the deck floor of vessels.

In 1840, he erected a sawmill on a small brook which flowed through the farm, which, for many years, was the only one in that part of the town, and existed until the portable mills became more convenient. He also owned and operated the first cider mill, known as a grater mill, which ground the apples instead of crushing them, as was done in the wooden nut mills. Although not having the advantages of an education, he knew its value, and, considering the intervals between the summer and winter term too long, and being unable to convince the town that more time should be given to the school terms, he erected, at his own expense, a schoolhouse on the farm, and, employing a teacher, he opened the doors for the public, which, seeing the advantage, soon filled the building and supplemented the district schools.

Mr. Coburn was known to the people of the town as "Deacon Abel." When only two years of age, he had the misfortune of losing his father, who was killed by a fall from a mast while engaged in shipbuilding. His mother, with her little ones, returned to Dracut, and settled on what is now Varnum Ave., on land inherited from her father.

While not having in abundance this world's goods, she instilled into the minds of her children the need of thrift, honesty of dealing and the desirability of leading good lives. This gave them a desire for knowledge, which, at every opportunity they improved. Mr. Coburn's education was secured in the district school, with a brief attendance at the Academy at Pembroke, N. H.

He learned the trade of mason, being employed in the construction of many of the mill buildings of Lowell. Not possessing rugged health, he turned his attention to farming, and in 1871, he carried the U. S. Mail between Lowell and Windham, N. H., his term of service expiring in 1877. He held the office of Deacon in the Pawtucket Church from 1859 to 1872. His business ability was recognized by the townspeople, and he was chosen one of the selectmen, holding the office of chairman in 1874.

He was strictly honest in his dealings, a keen judge of human nature, of a merry, cheerful disposition, and deep religious experiences. He is buried in the Woodbine Cemetery, near Varnum Ave.

William, at the age of 17, with his brother, Jeremiah, at the age of 15, were volunteers in the American Army during the War of the Revolution. Of his services, we have no account, but we may be assured that he was devoted to the cause. As a lad, he refused to acknowledge allegiance to the mother country, well knowing that the alternative was imprisonment. With his younger brother, he escaped from the British soldiers, who arrested his father, and served in the ranks until promoted to the office of Lieutenant. At the close of the war, he returned to his father's farm, which he occupied until his death.

From a paper read at a reunion some years since, and furnished the writer by a granddaughter, Mrs. F. W. Flitner, we learn that, "He was a true soldier, a devoted patriot, an industrious, honest, and worthy citizen, and respected in all the relations of life. It was a scene that will scarce occur once in half a century to witness such a numerous throng of relations, and some of them of the fourth generation, following the venerable old man to his last resting place, the silent grave. All felt that they had lost a valued friend, and that the last link which bound them to the past was now gone forever."

He was born in the homestead on Mammoth Road, where his ancestors had lived. As a lad, he had an adventurous spirit, and when, in 1775, his father, Peter, marched to Bunker Hill, he accompanied him, and was present at the battle, although but little more than ten years of age. He received a good education and fitted for college, but chose the quiet life of a farmer, living at Collinsville Village, Dracut, in the house owned and occupied by his grandfather, John,⁴ now standing.

He was a lover of children, enjoying their talk, encouraging them in their play, and interested in their welfare. A man of generous disposition and amiable qualities.

Academies, graduated from Waterville College, 1841, and from Harvard Law School in 1845, formed a law partnership with his brother, Stephen, under the name of A. & S. Coburn, with an office in their native town, but soon left the practice of law and settled upon a farm. He was exemplary in his life, honorable and charitable, always ready to extend a helping hand to the needy.

553. SAMUEL WESTON⁶ COBURN (Eleazer,⁵ Eleazer,⁴ Aaron,³ Joseph,² *Edward*¹) was born in Bloomfield, Me., July 14, 1815, and died in Skowhegan, Me., July 30, 1873; married, Dec. 6, 1842, Sarah Bigelow, dau. of Levi and Sarah (Emery) Bigelow of Bloomfield, Me., who was born Jan. 3, 1818; died Sept. 22, 1912; they dwelt in Skowhegan, Me.; he was graduated at Waterville College.

Children:

- i. Son, d. young.
- ii. SARAH FRANCES, b. Sept. 15, 1843; m. April 5, 1866, John Flavel Turner, Deering, Me., who was b. Aug. 22, 1837, and d. April 7, 1912.

- iv. JULIA LOWELL, b. April 23, 1849.
- v. ELLA MARY, b. Oct. 7, 1851; m. Dec. 24, 1870, Manley T. Pooler.

His early life was passed on the paternal farm, and he was educated primarily in the common schools. He attended Bloomfield Academy, and prepared for college at the China (Maine) Academy. He entered Waterville (now Colby) College, from which he was graduated in 1841. While a student in academy and college, he taught school during his vacations, and after graduation from the latter, he accepted a position as teacher in the Academy at Saco, Me. After being thus occupied for one term, he went to Canada, in company with his brother, Alonzo, their purpose being to acquire a more thorough knowledge of the French language, to which they had already given much attention. After some time thus spent, and after making a tour of the states bordering upon Canada, Samuel W. Coburn returned to Skowhegan and engaged in a mercantile business, which he conducted successfully for about ten years, also conducting the farm, and he devoted himself altogether to the latter after relinquishing his store. In his agricultural pursuits, he made a specialty of breeding Durham cattle, and at that early date, accomplished much toward raising the standard of live stock, not only in his neighborhood but in the country-at-large. In 1859, he took a cargo of blooded cattle to his brother's ranch in California, sailing by way of the Isthmus of Panama. After remaining in California for two and a half years, he returned home in 1852, and thereafter lived a quiet life upon his farm, in Bloomfield. He was a man of enterprise and public spirit, and from time to time was called to various positions of honor and trust. He was a member of the Baptist Church, and for many years taught a large Bible class in the Sunday School, composed of adults, both male and female, and the largeness of the class and the interest taken by its members bore witness to his deep knowledge and capability in imparting instruction. He was a strong anti-slavery man, and became an original member of the Republican party on its organization in 1856. During the Civil War, he was loyally devoted to the Union, and labored efficiently in the promotion of enlistments in the army, and in providing for the families of the brave men who went to the front. He was a tireless worker in the cause of temperance.

554. STEPHEN⁶ COBURN (Eleazer,⁵ Eleazer,⁴ Aaron,³ Joseph,² *Edward*¹) was born in Bloomfield, Me., Nov. 11, 1817, and died July 4, 1882; married, June 29, 1853, Helen Sophia Miller, dau. of Rev. Charles and Susan D. (Thompson) Miller of Skowhegan, Me., who was born at Turner, Me., March 25, 1832, and died June 27, 1910; they dwelt at Skowhegan, Me.

- *ii. CHARLES MILLER, b. June 17, 1860; graduate of Colby College, 1881; d. July 4, 1882.

He was a member and faithful supporter of the Baptist Church, and always its trusted adviser. He was a strong temperance man and a public-spirited citizen. He was warm-hearted, generous of time and money to all who needed help, and a lover of peace. In all the relations of life, he bore the part of peacemaker, and exercised his fine tact, his trained judgment, and his large influence to restore harmony or to prevent discord. As a lawyer, he was noted for bringing about friendly settlements of cases whenever it was possible, and his advice was much sought by women, who felt that they could safely trust him.

* Charles Miller Coburn, born June 17, 1860, graduated from Skowhegan High School, 1877, Colby College, 1881, studied law in his father's office. He was a young man of sterling character and of great promise, the last male representative in his generation of a family which had numbered nine brothers. He died at Skowhegan, Me., July 4, 1882.

His college classmate and lifelong friend, Rev. Joseph Ricker, wrote of him: "Stephen Coburn was one of those choice spirits that are met with only here and there in life's journey. He was honest in purpose, clear-eyed in judgment, firm in conviction, and frank in expression. What wonder, then, is it that he was loved and trusted as few men ever are? Without disparagement to others, I may say that his was the most unselfish life that has ever fallen under my notice. Charminglly unconscious of his own worth, it was a pleasure to him rather than a task, to serve others."

Like his brothers, he worked, as a boy, on his father's farm, and attended the district school. He prepared for college at Waterville and China Academies, and entered Waterville (now Colby) College in the sophomore year, graduating in 1839, second in his class. After graduation, he went South, and taught for a year in a private family in Tarboro, N. C., conducting what was called a plantation school, to which several planters sent their children. Returning to Maine, he became Principal of Bloomfield Academy, and held this position for four years, 1840-44. He was an accomplished teacher, and prepared a number of students for college. After leaving the profession of teaching, he retained his interest in educational matters, and a number of times privately fitted young men for college or for admission to the bar. He was a member of the Maine Board of Education, 1848-50, in which position his experience and professional knowledge enabled him to do valuable service. In later years, as a member of the Board of Bloomfield Academy, he was largely instrumental in bringing about the consolidation of the Academy with the Skowhegan High School, a step which proved of lasting benefit to the community. He kept up his interest, also, in higher education, and in 43 years after graduation, never missed attending his college commencement, excepting the one year he was in the South.

Desiring to enter into active business life, he began the study of the law in the office of Bronson and Wourt at Augusta. He also attended lectures at Harvard Law School, but did not complete the course. Admitted to the bar of Somerset County in 1845, he opened a law office in Skowhegan, in company with his brother, Alonzo, under the name of A. & S. Coburn. This partnership did not last long. Mr. Coburn then associated with himself Henry A. Wyman, and in company with him, conducted a large practice under the firm name of Coburn & Wyman, until the death of the junior partner in 1867. After this time, Mr. Coburn gradually withdrew from active practice, the large business interests of his brothers, A. & P. Coburn, requiring much of his professional assistance, and his own private studies engrossing more of his time. He acted as attorney for the Maine Central R. R. Co., during the years in which his brother Abner was President of the road.

Stephen Coburn was intensely interested in political affairs, having been a Whig in early life, and joining the Republican party at its organization. He did not, however, care for public position, and the only one that he held came to him unsought. In 1860, he was elected a Representative to the 36th Congress to fill out the unexpired term of Israel Washburn, who was made Governor of Maine. He was in Washington during the critical winter of 1860-61, and stood near Abraham Lincoln when he took his first oath of office. He was Postmaster of Skowhegan, 1868-77.

Amid the pressure of business, Mr. Coburn found time for extensive reading and study, especially in the fields of philosophy, logic and philology. He was an unwearied student, and found his happiness among his books, and in his family. He was naturally diffident in temperament, and preferred retirement to publicity, and yet was always ready to do his duty as he conceived it, however unpleasant.

Governor Abner Coburn, second son of Eleazer Coburn, was born in that part of Canaan now embraced in Skowhegan, March 22, 1803, and resided, during the whole of his busy and eventful life, within a few miles of his birthplace. From his Puritan ancestors he inherited a robust constitution, sound practical sense, and mental powers of a high order, and he was taught from childhood the distinctively Puritan virtues of integrity and industry. In his young days, every man was expected to live by the labor of his hands. Agriculture was the almost universal occupation, and in the interior of Maine the clearing of land, the making of new farms, and the building of new homes called for a life of unceasing toil by all. As soon as Abner Coburn was old enough, he began to make himself useful in the miscellaneous labor of the farm, and he continued throughout his life to be an exceedingly industrious man. For education, he had what the district school could give him, supplemented by a few of the first terms of Bloomfield Academy. Before he was twenty he was doing a man's work on the farm, and teaching school in the winter at $10 per month and "boarding round." He learned surveying of his father, and when he was twenty-two years old, began to work on his own account as a surveyor.

In 1830, Eleazer Coburn and his sons, Abner and Philander, began lumbering operations on the Kennebec River, their first purchase of timber lands being made at that date. The business was continued under the name of E. Coburn & Sons until 1845, when the father died, and the firm was reorganized as A. & P. Coburn. Few business firms in Maine were so widely known as this one, or did so large a business. It may safely be said that no firm was more successful, or won a more enviable reputation for sagacity and business integrity. For a generation the Coburn Brothers were known as leading business men from the source to the mouth of the Kennebec. Many men in Northern Somerset, who began to work for them as boys, grew gray in their employment. These hardy, intelligent lumbermen gave to their chiefs a loyal service such as few employers have received, and no employers have been more worthy of such service. Some who began as boys in their employ became men of property, and independent operators. They gave a start in business to a large number of men who became successful, and kept others from failure and ruin by helping them over hard places and setting them on their feet again, thus saving them to the business interests of the community. The firm of A. & P. Coburn did not obtain prosperity by sharp practices, or unworthy competition with others or wild speculation, but by sane and legitimate business methods, through industry and forethought. The secret of their success in the land and lumber business lay in their rare judgment in buying, and their tenacity in holding when times of disaster came. They pursued the policy of buying lands whenever they could to advantage, and holding them, regardless of the ups and downs of the market. They foresaw the growth of New England under the stimulating influence of railway development, and they knew that Maine timber lands would have an increasing value as years went by. Thus they came to be the largest landowners in the state, possessing at one time seven hundred square miles. They also acquired many thousands of acres of valuable land in the West, in Michigan, Wisconsin, Dakota and Washington.

Speaking of the remarkable credit enjoyed by his firm, a Boston business man said: "I never saw anything like it. I knew the Coburns when I was selling goods in the Kennebec Valley in the Forties. There was hardly any money in the region, but it seemed to me that nearly every local storekeeper and well-to-do farmer had a piece of paper, signed A. & P. Coburn, which they held to be as good as money, and which had been given for produce for the lumber camps. Indeed, I think they were used as currency. Everybody had confidence in them." These notes were all paid. It is said that when Abner Coburn was governor, he on more than one occasion affixed A. & P. Coburn to a bill which the legislature had enacted, so accustomed was he to signing the firm name.

The Coburns became interested in railroad enterprises in 1854, when they led a subscription for the Somerset and Kennebec Railroad Company for the purpose of building a line to Skowhegan. From the first, one or the other of the brothers was a director of this road, and for several years prior to its perpetual lease to the Portland & Kennebec, Abner Coburn was its president, becoming afterwards a director of the consolidated line. After several years of conflict with the Maine Central Company, the Portland & Kennebec was consolidated with it under the name of Maine Central, and Abner Coburn became one of the directors of the new company. In 1875, he was made president of the Maine Central Railroad Company, and managed the road in the interest of the stockholders, regardless of those who wished to make it subservient to other purposes, notably that of bolstering up the almost bankrupt Eastern Railroad. His management of the Maine Central was a model of economy and efficiency. In 1878, after serving three years, he resigned the presidency.

The great service which Governor Coburn, as he was generally called, rendered Maine in the development of its railroad system cannot be overestimated. For more than a quarter of a century, he devoted time and money to it, when the general opinion was that it was a misfortune to be a stockholder in any of the four corporations east of Portland which now make up the great system known as the Maine Central. In the darkest hours of the enterprise, he more than once attested his faith by pledging his private fortune to meet its obligations. One incident of this kind is narrated as follows: Soon after one of the consolidations by which the present Maine Central was built up, there came a period of hard times. Business fell off, and the company had a large floating debt, the holders of which were importunate for payment. In their perplexity and distress, it occurred to one of the members of the Board to apply to Governor Coburn. Several of them went to see him at his home, and laid the case before him, saying that they saw no way but for him to endorse the paper of the Maine Central for $200,000 at once, and for $500,000 later, if necessary. The governor said not a word nor asked a question until the spokesman had finished, and then he simply asked them for the note, which he signed. The confidence which he inspired quieted the anxiety of the creditors, and the crisis was over. The manager of one Savings Bank holding a large amount of the corporation paper, who had been urging payment with great persistency, said: "Give me Governor Coburn's endorsement, and you can have the money as long as you wish." It was given, and the manager was satisfied. In connection with their land enterprises and otherwise, the Coburns were interested in several western railroads, among them the Northern Pacific.

At the incorporation of the Skowhegan Bank, the first bank in the town in 1833, Mr. Coburn was one of the directors, and he subsequently became its president. When it was reorganized in 1863, under the National Banking Act, as the First National Bank, he was made president, which position he held throughout his life. He was also president of the Skowhegan Savings Bank from its organization in 1869. A large amount of his time and thought were given to these institutions, and they profited greatly by his financial wisdom and experience.

Mr. Coburn took a deep interest in political affairs. His family connection was with the Federalist party, and he cast his first vote for President for John Quincy Adams in 1824. Later, he became a Whig. He served three terms in the Maine House, 1838, 1840 and 1844, being a member of the following committees: Finance, Northeastern Boundary, Banks and Banking, State Lands and State Valuation. In 1852, when General Scott was the Whig candidate for the presidency, Mr. Coburn was on the electoral ticket. When the Whig party was broken up, he became a Republican, being among the founders of that party in the state. In 1855, he was a member of Governor A. P. Morrill's council, and in 1857 of the council of Governors Hamlin and Williams. He headed the electoral ticket when Abraham Lincoln was elected President in 1860. In 1862, he was the Republican candidate for Governor, and was elected, receiving 42,744 votes to 32,108 for Bion Bradbury, Democrat, and 6,764 for General Jameson, War Democrat. Governor Coburn filled the office during the trying year of 1863. He was one of the loyal War Governors, who held up the hands of Lincoln in those troublous times. He was Governor in fact as well as in name, and there was no power behind the throne. The business of the state was conducted on strict business principles, with the same integrity which characterized the man in all the relations of life. Although this course gave dissatisfaction to some and made some enemies among politicians, he adhered rigidly to it, and in after years, even those who had differed from him at the time, admitted that the State never had a more efficient administration than Governor Coburn's.

He did not always act according to custom, but followed his own judgment, based on his ideas of right and justice. The following incident illustrates his independent methods. The First Maine Cavalry had lost several of its field officers, and was in such a condition that promotion in the regular order did not appear to him to be expedient. He listened to the arguments of the different parties concerned, and after a few days announced the nomination of two young officers not the oldest in rank, to the first places in the regiment. "I have carefully looked the matter over," was his reply to all protests. "I know these men; their appointment is the best thing for the regiment." The sequel proved that he had acted wisely, and the regiment, under its new leadership, brought honor to the state.

Governor Coburn's message to the legislature was practical, and showed careful thought concerning the needs of the State, and appreciation of the awful issues of war that were hanging in the balance. He said: "The total quota of troops demanded of Maine up to this point by the War Department, amounts to something less than the number we have actually furnished.

The patriotism of our state has even surpassed the demands which the national exigency has made upon it. We have not only sent all the men asked of us, but we have sent good men and brave men. In a contest where all the loyal states have responded so nobly, it would be invidious and indeed positively offensive for any one to arrogate peculiar and superior merit. We only claim, with others, to have done our part, and we recur with undisguised pride to the fact that on every battlefield where Maine troops have been called to participate, they have acquitted themselves with valor and with honor, making a record of patriotic heroism which it will be alike the pride and duty of the State to cherish and perpetuate. In addition to the men that Maine had furnished to the army of volunteers, we have contributed to the naval and marine service more largely in proportion to our population than any other state. The habits and occupation of a considerable number of our people fit them pre-eminently for this service, and it is gratifying to know that our shipping ports and coast towns have sent forth swarms of hardy and well-trained seamen to maintain the honor of our flag upon the ocean."

His attitude toward the public finances is set forth in the following: "I have already alluded to the fact that within the past year the sum of $30,000 of the state debt was paid. During the present year, $50,000 more will mature, and I earnestly recommend that it be paid, instead of being renewed, as has too frequently been our custom in the past. The policy of liquidation, in my judgment, is the true, safe and wisely economical one for the State to adopt. Whatever may be the theory or the truth in regard to the advantages of a national debt, I do not think that a state debt should remain unpaid a day longer than the time when the people can discharge it without specially or unduly burdening themselves with taxation." On the subject of education, he said: "The educational interests of the State are fully and ably set forth in the report of the superintendent of schools. It is one of our chief glories that we provide, at the public expense, for the education of all the children of the State. Our fathers wisely imposed it as a constitutional duty, and we are reaping the rich advantages of their foresight and their wisdom. While we may not be in a condition to make any extraordinary expenditures for educational purposes, it will be one of our highest duties to see that our schools are maintained in full vigor and usefulness, and that while other interests may suffer from the inevitable effects of war, the culture of the young shall in no wise be neglected or abated."

In further discussion of the war, he said: "We are well advanced in the second year of a war involving issues of the gravest moment to all of us. The contest was precipitated by those, who, no longer able to rule, were determined to ruin the government of the United States. The ostensible reason for secession was one which, if admitted to have any force, would forthwith destroy every element of Democratic Republicanism which exists in our institutions—for if a constitutional majority of the people cannot have the right to elect the President of their choice, our form of government is at an end, and its attempted perpetuation is a farce. From the day the Southern conspirators made open war on the United States by assaulting Fort Sumter, the question passed to the arbitrament of the sword, and not to have accepted the issue would have been to basely surrender the life of the nation. Thus far we have, with patriotic unanimity, sustained the President in all his efforts to subdue the rebellion. The people of the loyal states have poured out their treasure and their blood in unstinted measure, and in their devotion to country men have forgotten the prejudices of party."

In reference to the newly adopted policy of emancipation, he said: "The rebels are entitled at our hands during the war to nothing more and nothing less than the treatment prescribed by the laws of war, and we can and ought and will seize every legitimate weapon to conquer their military power and reduce them to obedience to the Constitution of the United States. It is on this ground that loyal men can rally with enthusiasm to the support of the President. And it will not abate the force of the new policy that its result is to give freedom to a race long oppressed, and to abolish an institution which has been the source of evil dissension at home, and the cause of shame and reproach to us abroad. It will be clearly within the dispensation of God's justice that a system of oppression which violates the natural rights of man, which has always stirred up strife and contention, and which was the direct cause of our present troubles, should wither and perish in the wrathful storm which, in its rage, it dared to provoke." The message closed as follows: "We enter upon public duty, gentlemen, at a time of unusual responsibility, when human wisdom alone may well be distrusted. But, relying upon the guidance of that Gracious Being who hath so bountifully blessed us as a nation, and who chastiseth but in mercy, let us, in humility and yet in confidence, address ourselves to the conscientious discharge of the trusts committed to us by the people of our beloved state."

Later in the year, in response to fresh calls for troops by the national government, Governor Coburn addressed the people of the State with earnest appeals for patriotic action. From two of these state papers the following extracts are taken: "Our people, with almost entire unanimity, have determined that the present rebellion shall be suppressed, and that the Union which it was designed to destroy, shall be maintained. For this purpose they entered upon the contest, and to this end they will persevere until the object be accomplished, and until the world shall be satisfied that free men can endure more, and persevere longer, for the preservation of free government, than can the most desperate and determined traitors for its destruction. The length of the conflict is not to be measured by years, but by events. Treason is to be put down, and to that end should all the measures of the government be subservient." "Thus far in our great civil contest Maine has borne a proud part. Her sons have upheld the national banner on the fiercest battlefields, and have earned a fame which we cannot too proudly cherish, and which we should strive to emulate. Let us, in the brief season allowed us, prove that our patriotism is as sincere, our enthusiasm as warm, and our faith in the national cause as firm as at any hour since the contest began. Whoever else shall falter or fail, let the men of Maine prove themselves fully equal to the demands now made on their heroism and their love of country."

In spite of the extent and multiplicity of Governor Coburn's business interests, he found time for many duties such as a public spirited man owes to the community and the state, and for a wide philanthropy. He was very practically interested in the cause of education, and few men in Maine have done more for the support of our higher educational institutions. He was for forty years a trustee of Colby College, taking his father's place in 1845, and serving until his death, and was President of the Board the last eleven years. He was President of the Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, now the University of Maine, for twelve years, 1867-1879. To both of these institutions he gave a large amount of attention, and liberal contributions. Waterville Classical Institute at Waterville, which was renamed for him Coburn Classical Institute, received from him a fine school building, erected as a memorial to his deceased brother, Stephen Coburn, and his nephew, Charles Miller Coburn, and he also provided it with an endowment of $50,000. Somerset County was indebted to him for a commodious court house, and the Town of Skowhegan was largely indebted to him for the fine public hall which was called by his name, and which served the people of the community until it was destroyed by fire in 1904. Although not a member, Governor Coburn was a constant attendant of the Baptist Church, to which he was much attached. He doubtless contributed more money for the building of churches and the missionary and educational work of that denomination than any other man in the State. His private charities were almost numberless, and were dispensed so unostentatiously that probably but a small part of them were ever known. His habits and manner of living were simple, even to frugality. Neither Abner Coburn nor his brother Philander were ever married, and they made their home together.

A brief extract from a memorial address delivered by a personal friend of Gov. Coburn, Col. Z. A. Smith, at the Colby Commencement following his death, will give an idea of his personal habits and character. "In his private life and in his personal relations, Governor Coburn was the same upright and conscientious man that he was in business and public affairs. He was so conspicuously free from the appearance of vice of every nature, that even the idlest village gossip never had the semblance of pretext to trifle with his name. All his life, he was not only a total abstainer from intoxicating liquors, but in all things, he lived an abstemious and frugal life. Although his earlier life was spent much in contact with men of rough habits, he was, in his intercourse with all, refined in speech and deferential in act. Impure or profane words never passed his lips. Just to all men, he was, at the same time and in the best ways, kind, helpful, and sympathetic. Few men have had more occasion to know the wickedness and the ingratitude of other men, yet he was in speech and act the most charitable of men towards the failings and sins of others. Integrity so permeated every fibre of his moral and intellectual being, that he often seemed unable to realize that a man could be a rascal."

Governor Coburn was an interesting and instructive talker. He kept himself acquainted with all current subjects of importance, and his opinions on the tariff, the currency and business questions generally were valuable and interesting. On one occasion, he gave his views on the causes of industrial depression as follows: "Business will revive just as soon as there is anything like free employment for the people who depend on wages for a living. There is over-production only because the people who depend on wages cannot earn them and because, when close times come, those who can employ labor make haste to reduce their expenditures. Give the labor of the country employment and good wages, and you will hear no more of over-production. That people will enjoy the greatest degree of prosperity which spends freely within their means. A community which hoards, and spends the least possible, will never be one of business enterprise. What we want now is a market for labor at a fair compensation to restore prosperity."

His recollections of his early life were vivid. He could speak in the most entertaining way of the struggles of the early part of the nineteenth century, of the manner of living, and of the peculiarities of the people of that time. He knew the foremost men of Maine for half a century, and from him one could get a better idea of their characteristics than from any other source. He was charitable in his judgment, and rarely spoke in condemnation of anyone. He once said of an adroit man, "If you want to track him sure, go in the opposite direction from that in which his toes point." Of a Maine officer during the war, he said, "He wrote so many letters urging his own promotion that he couldn't have done any fighting." When the greenback craze swept over Maine, someone told him that a certain man had become an advocate of fiat money. "That is proper," he replied, "that man always maintained that he had paid a debt when he gave his note for it." He liked direct men. "John B. Brown of Portland," he said, "is a man who says what he means, so that you can understand him." "Payson Tucker," he said, "is a man of wonderful tact in getting along with people. He is the best railroad man I ever met." "Josiah Drummond is a man you can always believe." Such were his judgments of men with whom he was associated.

Governor Coburn was a sufferer from dyspepsia during the last years of his life, and for several months before his death showed signs of a breaking up of his vigorous constitution. In the early part of December, 1884, he went to Augusta as a member of the Electoral College, to cast his vote for James G. Blaine for President, and while there was taken severely ill. He returned to his home, and after a few weeks of illness, during which he was able a part of the time to attend to business, he passed away Jan. 4, 1885. By his will he left more than a million dollars for religious, educational and philanthropic work. His public bequests were as follows: To the Maine Insane Hospital at Augusta, $50,000; to the Maine General Hospital at Portland, $100,000; to the Maine State College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, $100,000; to Colby University, $200,000; to the American Baptist Home Missionary Society, $200,000, the income of one-half to be applied in aid of Freedmen's schools; to Wayland Seminary at Washington, $50,000; to the American Baptist Missionary Union, $100,000; to the Maine Baptist Missionary Convention, $100,000; to Houlton Academy, $5,000; to the Maine Industrial School for Girls, $5,000; to the Baptist Church in Skowhegan, $18,000; to Bloomfield Academy, $7,000; for a free public library in Skowhegan, $30,000; to the Town of Skowhegan, for its worthy and unfortunate poor, $20,000; to the Town of Skowhegan, land for a public park.

In his message to the Maine Legislature, Governor Robie said of Mr. Coburn: "Another man upon whom the people have wisely conferred their highest honors has passed away. Hon. Abner Coburn, the representative man of the best characteristics of New England simplicity, integrity and economy, is no more. His life is a monument of great usefulness, of high public spirit and patriotism. * * * Called to the office of governor during the most trying period of the late war, he displayed firmness, sagacity and patriotism, of the highest order. His life, character and achievements are an honor to Maine, and proud is the state that can claim the birth and citizenship of such a man."

The following extract from a private letter of Hon. James G. Blaine, written a few days after Governor Coburn's death, may here be given as a worthy tribute to his memory, and may serve as a fitting summing up of his character:

"Governor Coburn was altogether a remarkable man. With only rudimentary training in early life, he has proved our most liberal and discriminating patron of classical education. With no gift for public speaking, he has constantly exerted a wise and beneficent influence on public opinion. He was, if humanity can ever attain perfection, an absolutely just man in all his dealings. And beyond the severe demands of justice, he was always kind and even generous to his fellowmen. Singularly quiet and unobtrusive, the world around him had little knowledge of the constant flow of his charity, of the numberless good deeds which adorned his daily life. He was altogether modest and disliked everything which savored of pretension or show. His life was, indeed, a model of simplicity. The large fortune which his industry and sagacity had enabled him to accumulate was in his own view a "trust fund," which he held for the benefit of mankind, and the disposition of which was with him a matter of conscience. He never had a dollar to waste, but he always had thousands for a worthy cause.

In thirty years of personal intimacy with Governor Coburn, I never saw anything in his life and conversation that was not praiseworthy. He was never impatient nor faultfinding nor revengeful. His only form of censure was silence, and his friends came to know how much that meant on certain occasions, respecting certain persons. To those whom he called friends, he was devotedly true. But he never made professions of attachment and was never effusive. In his crisp and pointed correspondence, no matter what the degree of intimacy with the person to whom he wrote, he always began his letters with the stiff "Dr. Sir" of olden times, and signed himself "Resp'y," or "Truly yours." But with this undermonstrative and formal manner, there was as kindly a heart as ever beat in human breast, and with it a hand as helpful as ever came to a friend's relief."

Philander Coburn, third son of Eleazer Coburn, was born in Canaan, Maine, (now Skowhegan), Feb. 19, 1807. Brought up on his father's farm, he developed, by active farm work, his unusually fine physique. His education was obtained at the district school and at Bloomfield Academy, and he taught several terms in the district schools of his town. He was early taught the surveying business by his father, and became a skillful surveyor. The story of his business life, as a member of the lumbering firm of E. Coburn and Sons, which was established when he was twenty-three years old, and which, after the father's death, became A. & P. Coburn, has already been told in the sketch of his brother, Abner. While, in their younger days, both brothers went into the woods, in later life Philander took the practical end of the business, and supervised the lumbering operations of the firm. For this work, he was specially qualified by his great powers of endurance, his energy and daring, and his spirit of enthusiasm in whatever he undertook. When Abner went "down river," Philander went "up river." He was an expert woodsman, and used to say he could tell a fir tree from a spruce three miles away. He was tall and powerfully built, and capable of travelling nights and working days, which he often did. He used frequently to start from his home near nightfall, with his big horse, Railroad, famous up and down the river, in the sleigh, travel forty or fifty miles before morning, and be ready to cruise the woods all day. His return trips were sometimes made at night in the same way. He would drop the reins in the front of the sleigh, and fold his arms, and if he happened to fall asleep, Railroad would bring him safely home. In the woods, there were few men who could keep up with him, for he seemed to require neither food nor sleep. His disregard of himself led him into more perils and hardships than fell to the lot of his associates.

He was a man of keen intellect, and contributed fully his share to the success of the firm in all its departments of activity. He was often the aggressive partner, while Abner was the conservative one. Boldness and caution were alike characteristics of his mind. His knowledge of human nature and skill in handling men were large factors in his business success. He treated his workmen with perfect fairness, shared with them the hardships and privations incident to their labor, and gave them sympathy and aid in times of misfortune. Thus he never had disagreements or misunderstandings with them, but always held their respect, and in many cases, won their unwavering and lifelong attachment. His associates in business were not treated by him as rivals to be overthrown, but, instead, were often helped over times of difficulty by wise counsel and substantial aid. He was genial and companionable, a most entertaining talker, and a good story-teller, possessing an inexhaustible fund of varied experiences to draw upon. Yet, in his real nature, he was reserved, and did not care for publicity. The only public office he ever held was when he represented his district in the Maine Senate in 1853. He was, however, deeply interested in political matters, belonging to the Whig party in early life, and becoming an enthusiastic member of the Republican party at the organization of the latter. He was never married, but resided with his brother, Abner, in the "Coburn House." His private life was without reproach, and his personal habits were like those of his brother, characterized by the greatest simplicity. The two brothers had a common bank account, and a common purse, and most of their gifts during the life of the younger brother came from "A. & P." Philander himself practiced much unostentatious charity, and assisted generously many philanthropic and religious enterprises. Though not a member, he was a constant attendant and supporter of the Baptist Church, and an active participant in its business meetings. He was always strongly interested in the temperance cause, being himself, as was his brother, a total abstainer from both liquor and tobacco.

His years of hardship and carelessness of himself finally broke down his superb constitution. His keen vision became impaired, and though his sight was restored by a successful operation for cataract, he was never afterwards able to do severe work. He died from a slow disease of the brain, March 8, 1876.

Sylvanus Pitts, born March 5, 1827, went to California in 1849, was engaged in mining and other occupations till 1854, when he bought a ranch at Santa Clara, and went into the thoroughbred Durham cattle business. In 1864, he removed to a ranch on Pomponia Creek, and in 1868 came to Pescadero, and went into company with his nephew, E. W. Marston, in the stage coach and livery business. He died, unmarried, at Pescadero, California, Jan. 18, 1874. He was a man of integrity and a loyal friend.

Preferring a more private life, he purchased, in 1871, a farm at Long Pond, in the limits of the Town of Tyngsboro, where, in addition to his farm duties, he, as owner of a pleasure ground on the shore of the pond, maintained suitable buildings, owned boats, and entertained fishing parties, picnic gatherings, and reunions. He was careful of the reputation of this resort, liberal in his terms to Sunday Schools, and discouraging anything which tended toward disorderly proceedings.

In 1895, he, with his advancing years, found the duties too exacting and sold the farm, afterward purchasing a smaller farm in town, where he spent quietly his remaining years.

Before roads were constructed in the Connecticut Valley of New Hampshire and Vermont, the way was marked on trees, by blazing and searing the bark on the side next the path; it was an unbroken wilderness, where the owl hooted and the wolf and the wildcat snarled in unison. The only corn mill was at Charleston, N. H., and from the distant points the pioneers carried the grist, often on their backs. As Mr. Colburn was thus journeying home, a large catamount dropped from a tree, directly upon the bag. This probably saved Mr. Colburn's life; he left the meal and the varmint together, and reached home in safety. For a long time, in these pioneer settlements, the only meat was wild game. In place of potatoes, ground nuts were dug, baked, and eaten with bean porridge. Tea was made from the medical herbs which still grow in the land.

His ability to perform mathematical calculations was wonderful. When six years of age, he was solving problems in public in Boston, and two years later in London. Being asked the number of seconds since the Christian era to that time (1813), he answered correctly, 57,234,384,000. Also, how many days and hours in 1811 years, he answered in twenty seconds, 661,015 days, 15,864,130 hours. He visited Ireland, Scotland and France, where his wonderful mathematical powers were displayed before large audieuces. He was accompanied by his father and returned to London in 1816. He entered Westminster School when fifteen years of age, and soon became a teacher in the same school. He returned to this country in 1824, but before this time had lost his wonderful power of calculation. Mr. Colburn was of the sturdy New England stock, and lived an active, useful life.

When twenty-five years of age, he was elected Colonel of the 7th N. H. Regt., a position which he held, and for which he was highly qualified, for five years, when, on removal to the West, he resigned and left the service. In 1855, with his brother, Joseph R., he built a saw mill at Waukokee, Minn., one of the first to be erected in the County, where, for two years, he engaged in the lumber business. Previously to his removal to the West, he had turned his attention to the study of the law, and, finding the lumber business not congenial to his taste, he resumed the study of the law in Carimona, Minn.

In 1858, he opened a law office at Preston, and continued for four years at that place and Rushford, as an attorney.

In 1862, the Sioux Indians were troubling the settlers in the western part of the state, so he organized a Company, and assisted in the quelling of the disturbances. At this time, the state was on the frontier, and liable to receive incursions from the Indian tribes. The following year, President Lincoln, recognizing his ability, appointed him paymaster in the army, but, after a year's service in the Western Department, ill health compelled him to resign. He was elected to the Legislature of the State in 1866, and again in 1871, in both sessions being Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. He served acceptably for the term of ten years as County Attorney of Fillmore County.

In all these important offices of trust, he discharged the duties with fidelity, having always foremost in his mind the public good. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and was one of the charter members of the Mystic Chapter of the O. E. S., in which order he was elected Worthy Patron. In 1902, he was unanimously elected President of the National Bank of his town at its organization, an office which he held for four years. He also served as Mayor of the city, and President of the School Board, for which positions he was eminently fitted.

He became a leader in the political world, being an active member of the Republican party, and an effective speaker and organizer in the campaigns. His life was devoted to the advancement of all that is for the good of the community, whether in city, state or national affairs.

Nathan P. Colburn was born among the Granite Hills of New Hampshire, Feb. 6, 1817, and was educated in the public schools of his native town. Finding the limits of his father's farm too narrow for his ambition, he entered the employ of a tanner, where he remained until he was nineteen years of age, and the knowledge thus acquired was of great value in his after life. He went to Hopkinton, Mass., and commenced, as his small means would allow, the manufacture of shoes. His knowledge of the quality of leather gained during his work at the tannery, combined with his honesty and uprightness of dealing with his customers, brought to him prosperity, and he took, as an associate in the business, Hon. Lee Claffin, a partnership which continued until 1854, when he became a member of the firm of Claffin, Coburn & Co. of Hopkinton, which, under his able management, became one of the leading firms of the country for the manufacture of shoes. In 1877, he became a member of the firm of William Claffin, Coburn & Co. of Boston, where he remained until his retirement from active business in the closing days of December, 1891, after he had acquired a fortune by patient industry, untiring application to business, and fair and honest dealing with everyone.

Removing, in 1864, to Newton, he became interested in the welfare of the city, giving largely of his means towards the erection of the Eliot Church and the establishment of the Newton Free Library, of which, at the time of his death, he was a member of the Board of Management. He gave liberally to Colorado College for the erection of a Library Building, and for an endowment of the same. His native town was not forgotten, but benefitted by his gifts. In his will, he left large bequests to the Home Missionary Society, Eliot Church, Newton Hospital, Newton Home for Orphan Girls, the American College and Education Society, and for a public Library at Hopkinton. He was a member of the Board of Directors of the Manufacturers' Bank at its organization, a position he retained until his death. While living at Hopkinton, he was elected Representative to the General Court.

He was active during the War of the Rebellion, in recruiting young men for the service, and by his energy and influence, he contributed largely to the filling of the quotas of the State. By his ability to understand the state of the market, he was successful in buying and selling. His inventive skill and ingenuity assisted him in the improvement and work of the machinery which produced his wares.

Mr. Coburn was born at Fort Hill, Boston, but went, about 1830, to Cincinnati, Ohio, which, at that time, was on the western frontier. He located in that city, and engaged in the hardware business, afterward removing to Louisville, Ky., where, about 1840, he perfected a process by which oil could be produced from lard, and removed his family to Boston for the further development of the business. The difficulties of travel in those early days were such that it consumed eight days and nights to finish the journey.

He located first on Broad St., Boston, but, as his business increased, he built a large factory at Chelsea. The superior quality of the oil led to a large demand for it, and his venture proved a success.

"The Mathematics Teacher," a magazine devoted to the subject of mathematics, in the December number of 1911, published an editorial which, in part, we copy.

"Mr. Arthur R. Colburn, an attorney of Washington, D. C., has taken, as his recreation, the study of the Pythagorean theorem and its proofs. He started with a knowledge of but two proofs, those of Pythagoras and Euclid, and has rediscovered a good share of the well-known proofs, and a number of others, some of which are little known, if not entirely new. Mr. Colburn claims to have seventy-three proofs, but this number is excessive, because some of his proofs are duplicates, in whole or in part, of one or more of the others, or are such that if they are reduced to the essential minimum they become duplicates. Despite this fact, his work might well act as a spur to many teachers, who seem to consider geometry as a subject allowing little chance for investigation, owing to its centuries of study by master minds."

This is followed by a very interesting account of his work, with theorems, illustrations and explanations, which would be of little account in a history of this kind, but would be of great interest to those who understand the higher mathematics and the lovers of geometrical study.

Rev. Isaac D. Colburn was born of Revolutionary ancestry, on the farm in Hudson, N. H., which, for several generations, had been the home of the Colburn family.

He was admitted to the Communion of the Baptist Church, and baptized at the age of fifteen, and soon after, the church, recognizing his ability, gave him a license to preach the Gospel.

He accepted this as his life work, and began his studies at New Hampton, N. H., but the school being removed to Fairfax, Vt., he finished at that place his preparation for college. In 1855, he entered Brown University at Providence, R. I., an institution celebrated for the able men who have attended it. In Colonial days, it was called Rhode Island College.

His attention was called to the need of missionaries by the presence, in the class, of Elnathan Judson, a son of Adoniram Judson, who was one of the first to carry the Gospel to Burmah, or, as it was called, Farther India. He resolved to devote his life to this work, and in 1863, entered Newton Theological Seminary, having, as classmates, Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, and Rev. Dr. D. A. W. Smith, afterward President of the Karen Theological School at Insein, Burmah.

*Guy Blandin received his early education in the High School at Nashua, N. H., and entered Brown University, at Providence, R. I., where his father, Rev. Isaac D., prepared for his theological studies. Graduating from Brown's, where he received his degrees of A. B. and A. M., he chose the profession of instructor and teacher, and spent two years at the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, where he was honored with the title of Ph. D. He was a lover of archaeology, and, while engaged in teaching, looked forward to the time when he could visit the centers of archaeological research. The opportunity came in an unexpected manner.

Every year, a scholarship is presented by the Western colleges to some one person who is, by examination, most proficient in their studies, and which enables them to take an extended journey. He was selected as most worthy to receive the one for the year (1910), and he has travelled throughout Italy and Greece, enjoying this most fascinating study, and storing his mind with material for future work.

Graduating in June, 1863, he married Miss Mary E. Blandin of Townshend, Vt., a teacher in the academy at that place, and, with his wife, sailed for Burmah. As the sea about the Cape of Good Hope was infested with privateers belonging to the Southern Confederacy, they were obliged to go to England, and for safety, sail under the English flag. After an eventful voyage of six months, they reached their destination, and for four years were stationed at Tavoy, but his health was impaired by the effects of the climate, and he removed to Tonghoo, where he remained one year, after which, the remaining ten years of his missionary life were spent at Rangoon. In 1880, he was obliged, through ill health, to return to this country, where he remained until his death.

In addition to his duties as a missionary, he superintended the Mission Press at Rangoon, was Treasurer for the Burman missions, and was engaged in school and jungle work among the Sgan Karens. On account of ill health, his wife and children preceded him on his return, they returning in 1874. They resided at Townshend, Vt., for several years, but removed, in 1887, to Nashua, N. H., where, as his strength permitted, he engaged in religious work.

Dr. Colburn received his education in the public schools of Nashua, attending, for a time, the Nashua Literary Institute and Derry Academy, where he prepared for college.

Accepting, as his life work, his father's profession, he entered the Medical College at Woodstock, Vt., where he graduated in 1854.

He entered at once into the practice of medicine with his father, and, until his death, was one of the leading physicians of the city. He received his education in the district schools of his native town, afterward attending, for a short time, a school in Lowell. He was a lover of books, a good mathematician, and learned surveying, his services being in demand to recover lost lines, settle disputes relating to boundary lines, etc. He also learned the trade of carpenter and builder, and, being large and strong, he was physically fitted for it, while a love of invention and skillfulness in the use of tools enabled him to find employment. He was a valuable man in his father's sawmill as a sawyer and repairer.

The limits of the farm were too small for his ambitious nature, and he went West soon after attaining his majority. At that time, Illinois was on the outpost of civilization, and he found employment building railroads.

Being needed on the farm, he returned for a time, but soon went to Pennsylvania, where he established the Gift Book business, which was quite successful. Again returning home, he took charge of the farm, but in 1863, when the farm was sold, he found employment with the Boston & Lowell Railroad Co., having charge of the building and repair of bridges, a position which he retained until his death.

At the age of eighteen, he was in the N. H. Militia, as the law required every able-bodied man to serve. While a Private, there was a vacancy in the office of Captain, and at the election, he was the one who received the votes, which were nearly all in his favor.

He accepted the duties with reluctance, feeling his lack of training, but he applied himself so diligently to the work that he brought his Company to a degree of excellence never before reached. His services were recognized by his superior officers, and he was promoted to the office of Major and then Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment.

Daniel Coburn was a native of Dracut, where his earlier days were spent, and where he learned the millwright's profession under the direction of his father, Daniel,⁶ who was a prominent man in this line of business. In 1850, during the early days of gold mining, he went to California, but, like many others, saw greater possibilities and a more certain method of providing means of living in New England, and soon returned.

He became Superintendent of the Oriental Powder Mills at Gorham, Me., a business in which he excelled. In 1861, he was employed by the American Powder Co. of New Durham, N. H., to change their mills to the manufacture of powder, being employed for the same purpose by companies at Kingston, N. Y., and Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Colburn's life until his majority was spent on his father's farm in Dracut. His education was limited to what could be acquired in the district schools and in private schools in the vicinity. His application to his studies and desire for an education equipped him for the work in which, in after life, he engaged. Fond of mechanical work, and possessing ingenuity, he selected the occupation of carpenter, at which trade he worked until 1863, when he enlisted for nine months in the 6th Mass. Regt. He accompanied his regiment to the South, where he remained until his discharge, Jan. 29, 1864. Not possessing a rugged constitution, his health was impaired by the climate of the South and the duties of the field and camp, and he was confined for a time in the hospital, and finally discharged for physical disability. Unable, on this account to resume work at his trade, he entered the employ of the Hamilton Mfg. Co., of Lowell, as a painter, where he was engaged until 1880, when he removed to Maynard, where, for three years, he was with the Assabet Co. In 1883, the Hamilton Co., recognizing his ability, offered him the position of overseer of the painting department, which he accepted, and remained there until 1909, when the department was discontinued.

Mr. Coburn received the name of Dwight Foster, but in later years preferred to be known as Foster Dwight. Like many others who have achieved success, his early life was spent in humble circumstances. His parents, while not possessing a large amount of material wealth, were rich in a good reputation in the community, and in honesty of purpose. When three years of age, his father went to California in search of gold, and he was cared for by relatives, who, lacking a sense of parental responsibility, neglected to provide him with the means of receiving an education. His school life was confined to occasional terms of three months in the year at a district school in the country.

When fifteen years of age, the Civil War commenced, and he was prevented from enlisting by his father's opposition; but later, he ran away, and served a term of enlistment in an Illinois Regiment, reenlisting when the term expired. As a lad, he was impressed with the idea that Kansas was to be the state where he should locate. City life was not agreeable to one of his nature, and he looked forward to the time when he should become a farmer. Circumstances compelled him to be economical, and he walked to Kansas, crossing the Missouri River on the ice. This was in February, 1867. His occupation, at first, was removing the hides from dead cattle belonging to ranchmen, and performing other duties as required. Without doubt, these experiences laid the foundation for the great work which he has been privileged to perform, and he was unconsciously preparing for that success which came to him only through his persistence in study, his readiness to adapt himself to circumstances, his patience as a worker, and his knowledge of human nature. His next step upward led him to become a school teacher, but he accepted the duties as a means only, not as an end.

In due time, he became a farmer on his own account, and thus opened the way to satisfy his ambition. His desires were not selfish ones, he did not covet the applause of the people, but he discerned the need of better methods of farming. The possibilities of the vast West were dimly perceived by him, but he hoped to be of service to his adopted state, and to the agricultural community at large. That he has succeeded far beyond his expectations is proved by the fact that his name is known throughout the land as the leader in all matters relating to agriculture. He held the position of Editor of the Live Stock Indicator, published at Kansas City, Mo., and President of the Indicator Co. Recognizing his ability, the Secretary of Agriculture of the State of Kansas, J. H. Hudson, offered him a position, in 1880, in the office of the State Board, which he accepted, and where he served until January, 1892. He succeeded Mr. Hudson and became State Secretary. After an interval of two years, he was again elected to the office, to which he has been elected at each of the biennial elections which have followed. His first literary work was done while he was engaged in farming. The title was "Swine Husbandry," which was so well received that it was followed by "Swine in America." These works embodied his own experiences and observations, and materially advanced the industry. He became interested in alfalfa, and realized its value. He published pamphlets entitled "Alfalfa," and later, "The Book of Alfalfa," which has been in great demand by farmers and agricultural colleges. Space forbids an extended survey of the life and work of F. D. Coburn. His printed works include "The Beef Steer (and his Sister)," "The Helpful Hen," "Cow Culture," "The Cow, Plow and Steer," "Corn and the Sorghums," "Railroads and Agriculture," "Short Horn Cattle," "Hereford Cattle," "Polled Cattle," and many others. He was twice appointed by Governor Glick as Regent of the State Agricultural College, and twice elected President of the Board. He was President of the first National Corn Congress held in Chicago, in 1898, Treasurer of the state fund raised for the relief of famine sufferers in India, Chief of Department of Live Stock at Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1903-04, and other offices of a similar nature.

His ambition does not extend to receiving political honors. Had such been the case, he would have received the nomination for Governor of the State in 1898, but he declined the nomination. A vacancy occurring in the U. S. Senate during Gov. Hoch's term as Governor of the State, he was urged by the executive and many of his fellow citizens to accept the office, but again he refused.

President McKinley wanted him to hold the office of National Secretary of Agriculture, but these honors did not tempt him to relinquish the work in which he was engaged, the agricultural prosperity of Kansas. We quote from the Great Southwest Magazine: "He is a man of many parts, but with a single purpose: to accomplish where others theorize. * * * * The farmer has learned that he can rely absolutely on the statements contained in the publications prepared under the direction of Mr. Coburn."

From Hampton's Magazine: "In the Agricultural Colleges of Australia, where his books are used in the courses of instruction, in all the great farm institutes of the Middle West, among authorities everywhere, Coburn of Kansas is the biggest and safest authority of the century."

He has the distinction of being the only man in the United States who was ever known to refuse the office of U. S. Senator.

After leaving college, he became Principal of the North Bridge High School at Whitinsville, where he remained one year, after which he entered the Harvard Medical School, where he took his degree in 1873. When President Lincoln, in April, 1861, called for volunteers, Mr. Coburn was a member of Co. D, City Guards, which was the first to respond. He was in the same company with Ladd and Whitney, the two young men who lost their lives in the riot at Baltimore, on the nineteenth of April, and was severely wounded at that time. The Massachusetts Register for 1862 says he was "a farmer's son, marching in the rear rank. He was hit upon the head with bricks, and a minie ball passed through his body. He felt no pain at first, but the wound bled. He struggled to keep up with his company by hopping along; but, finding it impossible to do this, he fell out of the ranks, and somehow succeeded in getting through the crowd into a store. He was provided with a conveyance to the police station. * * * * As he was limping into the store, he felt the ball, which had passed through his body, breaking some of the bones, going down his leg, into his boot. When he took off his boot, the ball dropped out and he picked it up, expressing a desire to keep it. Someone present asked to take it for a moment, and it was never returned." He was removed to the house of a resident of Baltimore, a lady who had formerly lived in Billerica, who took care of him until he was able to be sent home. He recovered, but, very singularly, his leg was lengthened by the wound.

Not discouraged by this, he reenlisted in the 26th Mass., but failed to pass examination. Again he enlisted, this time in the 33rd Mass.; he was accepted, and served until the expiration of his term of enlistment. He was transferred to the Veterans' Reserve Corps, June 18, 1864, and was honorably discharged at Washington, Jan. 2, 1865. He was in the Battles of Chancellorsville, Pa., Beverly Ford, Va., Lookout Mountain, Mission Ridge, and the four days' Battle of Gettysburg. Faithfully performing his duty, his record is highly honorable.

He was born in the West during the days of the early settlement of that part of the country. As a lad, he was noted for his genial, good humor and generous nature, which made him a favorite with everyone with whom he came in contact. In 1846, he removed to Ontonagon, Mich., a town on Lake Superior, where, by industry and judicious investment in the land and mines of that region, he came into possession of wealth. In 1860, he was a delegate to the Republican Convention, which placed in nomination for President, Abraham Lincoln. He never cared for political life, and, although fully qualified to do so, he never accepted an office. In 1863, he journeyed South, visiting, at Murfreesboro, Tenn., his brother, John, who was then Colonel of the 33rd Indiana Vols. Soon after his return to his home, he had occasion to cross the lake in the steamer, "Sunbeam." During the first night, they encountered a severe gale, and, finding it impossible to reach their destination, the Captain attempted to turn and face the gale. Falling into the trough of the sea, the boat became unmanageable and capsized, and began to break in pieces. The passengers were transferred to the small boats, but they were unable to resist the waves and foundered, and all were lost except one of the sailors, who escaped on an improvised raft.

Children:

- i. SARAH.
- ii. CHARLES (adopted).

He was born at Indianapolis, Ind., when it was in its infancy as a town, and saw its advance to a large and important city, being identified, until his death, with its interests. Having inherited a studious disposition, he entered Wabash College, and graduated about 1846. His ability was recognized, and he was honored with the gift of public offices, and from 1859 to 1861, held the office of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. At the commencement of the Civil War, he resigned to take command of the 33rd Indiana Vols. He was in the service during the war, being at one time a prisoner in the hands of the enemy, but was exchanged later, and regained his liberty. He was with Gen. Sherman in the Atlanta Campaign, and was present at the surrender of this city, the loss of which was a severe blow to the Southern Confederacy, and which marked the beginning of the end. He was promoted to the office of Brigadier General, and at the close of the war he returned to his home to engage in peaceful pursuits.

When twenty-five years of age, he entered the State Legislature, and in 1867, was elected Representative to Congress, where he served four years.

With a clear knowledge of the needs of the country, he reported many important measures, several of which became laws. Returning from Congress, he was called upon to hold political offices for which his experience peculiarly fitted him, and in 1884 he became one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Montana. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at the time of his death.

He received his education in the public schools of Dracut, completing his studies at Phillips Academy, Andover. He at once entered his father's store, where he obtained a practical education, which was of great value to him in his business career. He continued with him until early manhood, but a country store being too limited for his ambition, he engaged for one year in the employ of an uncle in Hamilton, Ont., who was a manufacturer of farm machinery. He was given control of the collecting and sales department, and conducted it with so much skill that he was promoted to traveling salesman. In two years, he entered as partner, and became the business manager. The business prospered, and when a company was incorporated he was unanimously elected vice-president and general manager, a position that he maintained until his death.

Liberal in his views, he was willing to share with those in his employ, and thus strikes were averted.

Mr. Coburn's early home was in Boston. When quite young, he developed a love for photography. At the age of seventeen, he went to London, where there were greater opportunities to advance in the profession.

From his studio in London, he travelled on the continent, visiting the places of interest and making a collection of pictures. In 1906, he had an exhibition of pictures before the Royal Photographic Society of Great Britain, at the Society's House in Russell Square, London, which continued for two months. This exhibition was so successful that he travelled through France, Germany, Holland, Italy, etc., holding receptions and exhibitions. They have also been shown in many of the cities of this country. These include a large variety of portraits, landscapes and views in New York, London, Edinburgh, Rome, and many other principal cities. In addition to his skill as a photographer, he is a skillful artist, and his pictures have appeared in Harper's, The Century, Scribner's, Metropolitan, Everybody's, Pall Mall, and other magazines, also in the following books: "London," "New York," "Mark Twain," by Dr. Henderson, "The Door in the Wall," by H. G. Wills, and many others. His success is due, in a great measure, to his thorough knowledge of the quality of the material used in his work and his careful attention to the details. In the photogravure process which he used in illustrating his books, he ground his own colors, and weighed, each morning, the material to be used during the day, which were then mixed by his assistant. "In the West, perhaps, we have been all too used to the 'artistic' photographs that depend almost solely on a camera out of focus, and a deep toned, sometimes heavy, carbon print. To those who have become accustomed to this work, the studies by Mr. Coburn will come as no less than a revelation. Photographic work has come to be recognized as a sister art, and in some of the galleries * * * * separate rooms are set apart, near those for etchings, to exhibit photographic work."—Los Angeles Express. "Mr. Alvin Langdon Coburn is one of the most accomplished and sensitive artist-photographers now living. This seems impossible at his age, twenty-three; but, as he began at eight, he has fifteen years technical experience behind him. Hence, no doubt, his remarkable command of the one really difficult, technical process in photography-printing." (From G. Bernard Shaw's preface to catalogue of Mr. Coburn's work, shown at Russell Square, London.)

1419. OSCAR EDSON¹⁰ COLBURN (William L.,⁹ Luther,⁸ Augustus,⁷ Asa,⁶ David,⁵ Robert,⁴ Edward,³ Robert,² *Edward*¹) was born Dec. 23, 1872, and married Adelaide Mary, dau. of Alvin F. and Phebe Ann (Orcutt) Cathan, who was born Oct. 16, 1867.
